An anonymous employee from Ohio Rubber called. He stated that during World War I Ohio Rubber produced mustard gas and when the war was over they buried it on the property. The informant stated that no one knows where it is buried and that management warns employees who are digging on the property about the potential concern regarding the gas.

The informant has called OSHA because he is concerned about the large number of young men (age 20 - 33 years) who [redacted] work at the facility and [redacted] have died.
