Re: Ashtabula County
Complaint #7333

NON-RESPONSIVE

Dear [redacted]

Your complaint regarding odors coming from Acme Scrap Iron was received July 13, 1982. The following day I went to Acme Scrap Iron to investigate the situation. After talking with an Acme Scrap Iron representative and inspecting the yard and building, I could find no evidence of burning or storage and/or usage of chemicals or oils which would cause excessive odors.

Acme Scrap Iron operations occasionally produce fires when scrap containing oils or solvents catches fire during torch cutting. The Company has fire fighting equipment and is required to extinguish these fires as soon as possible. The Company representative stated they have had no such fires in the last three to four weeks.

After completing the inspection of Acme Scrap Iron, I went to your residence to talk with you some more, but no one answered the door.

Based on the information available, your complaint is going to be dismissed. However, if you have air pollution problems in the future, do not hesitate to contact this office.

Sincerely,

Candice L. Hatch, P.E.
Environmental Engineer
Division of Air Pollution Control
