MANCHIN: EPA PROGRESS ON PFAS CHEMICALS GOOD NEWS FOR WEST VIRGINIANS

Washington, DC – Today, U.S. Senator Joe Manchin (D-WV) applauded the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) decision to move forward on the Final Regulatory Determination regarding two per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) chemicals, PFOA and PFOS. The regulation, initially issued on January 15th, has been on hold since January 20th due to an across the board review of ongoing federal regulations as is typical under a new Presidential Administration. Following today's decision, the EPA can resume the process of establishing a national primary drinking water regulation, including setting a Maximum Contaminant Level which Senator Manchin has been fighting for since 2016.

"I commend the Biden Administration for making these new safe drinking water regulations a top priority right out the gate. Far too many West Virginians in Parkersburg, Vienna, and Martinsburg know all too well how dangerous these PFAS chemicals can be, but today's decision isn't just about West Virginia. Today's announcement is good news for all Americans who live in communities that have been impacted by these forever chemicals. As I've always said, every American deserves clean air to breathe and clean water to drink. I look forward to continuing to work with EPA officials to update these safe drinking water standards to fulfill that promise," said Senator Manchin.
