Chuck:

- County feels they're between a rock and a hard place - strong stand in opposition, but if the project is going to proceed, mitigation should be meaningful and in Pima Co

- Mitigation still is inadequate. Mitigation is not real because wet water is ~25% of paper rights. Mitigation possible with 25% of the 1122 AFY is far less than Rosemont needs
  - ↳ in order to get enough water, perhaps they could extend the existing reclaimed water pipeline and get water from BOR via indian water right settlement water and discharge into the creek

- County not willing to assume the liability for the mitigation

- indirect impacts likely understated - because the project is so high in the watershed it effects everything downstream
