Section VI. Additional Principles

The Union and the Agency further agree to the following principles:

A. Assign Work and Direct Employees: This Agreement is not to be interpreted or applied by the Union or by an arbitrator to prevent, limit or interfere with management's reserved right to assign work, including determining the method and manner to assign work and direct employees, except as provided by 5 USC 7106(b)(2) and (3) unless otherwise negotiated.

1. ~~The Agency will provide direction in an atmosphere manner that will avoid public embarrassment or ridicule.~~
   Employees should discuss conflicting orders with their immediate supervisor to resolve the conflict. ~~Employees will have the right to Union representation~~
1. Employees recognize their responsibility to promptly comply with all orders and instructions from their supervisors. If an employee reasonably believes that an order or instruction patently violates any law, rule, regulation, or Agency policy, they should state their beliefs to their supervisor. Additionally, Supervisors recognize their responsibility to ensure that all orders and instructions are consistent with law, rule, regulation, or Agency policy. The employee may document their belief that the order or instruction violated one or more laws, rules, regulations, or Agency policies. If an employee refuses to carry out an order or instruction promptly and the Agency takes an adverse personnel action against the employee as a result of such refusal, that employee may assert as a defense that ~~they believed~~ the order or instruction was~~to be~~ illegal. ~~An employee will not be subject to discipline on the basis that the employee carried out the order of the supervisor.~~

   ~~[AFGE OPEN TO LANGUAGE LIMITING THIS PARAGRAPH TO THE PARAGRAPH ABOVE] If there is a disagreement between the employee and the Agency regarding the employee's right to Union representation pursuant to this MCBA the meeting will be delayed no more than one full workday, in order to permit the employee to consult with their Union representative, and for the supervisor to consult with the local HR office. Contact with union representatives and/or HR officials should occur as soon as the meeting is scheduled.~~

B. Working Conditions: The Union recognizes the Agency's right to assign work.

1. ~~The Agency will not subject any employee to intimidation, coercion, harassment, or unreasonable working conditions as reprisal nor shall any employee be used as an example to threaten other employees.~~ Employees, in the legitimate exercise of their rights and responsibilities as designated representatives of the Union, will be protected from interference, restraint, or coercion by the agency. ~~All employees shall be treated fairly and equitably and without discrimination or actions that are threatening, intimidating, bullying and/or disturbing.~~

~~2. Manager Accountability. When an employee perceives inequity in working conditions, the employee or Union representative can request and the Agency shall:~~

b. Provide a Human Resource Management assessment per Standard Operating Procedures number 18-001S, dated January 3, 2018 when disparities exist. Interviewees will include (where appropriate): Employee Groups, First-line and second-line supervisors, Senior managers, Program Management Officer and/or staff, Regional Human Resources Officer and/or staff, Union Officials, Training Officer or staff. The assessment will be conducted within 30 calendar days of request in accordance with the Standard Operating Procedure. The identification of the employee requesting the assessment will remain confidential.

C. Service of a Warrant or Subpoena: If an employee is to be served with a warrant or subpoena, to the extent it is within the Agency's control, the service will be done in private without the knowledge of other employees.

D. Supervisory Instructions and Orders: Supervisors will provide instruction in an atmosphere that will avoid public embarrassment or ridicule.

1. Employees may refuse work if they reasonably believe that an order or instruction patently violates any law, rule, or regulation, or Agency policy. The employee should state their beliefs to their supervisor. Supervisors will ensure that all orders and instructions are consistent with law, rule, regulationregulation, or Agency policy. Employees must follow any lawful order. Employees may refuse a specific work assignment if performing the work assignment would violate law, rule, or regulation. It is a Prohibited Personnel Practice to take a personnel action against any employee for refusing to obey an order that would require the individual to violate a law, rule, or regulation.

2. The employee may document their reasonable belief that the order or instruction violated one or more laws, rules, or regulations, or Agency policies. If an employee refuses to carry out an order or instruction promptly and the Agency takes an adverse personnel action against the employee as a result of such refusal, that employee may assert as a defense that they believed the order or instruction to be illegal. An employee will not be subject to discipline on the basis that the employee carried out the order of the supervisor.

D. If a matter being investigated concerns potential criminal misconduct, warnings (Garrity or Kalkines) will be provided to interviewed employees, as appropriate.

E. Garrity Warning: At the commencement of, or as soon as it might become applicable during the course of, a voluntary investigatory interview, the Agency will provide an employee a warning regarding the employee's constitutional privilege against self-incrimination, which may be invoked when the employee reasonably believes their statements may be used against them in a criminal proceeding. An employee's refusal to respond based on a proper invocation of the privilege against self-incrimination may not be used as the sole basis for administrative disciplinary action. Evidentiary value of an employee's silence may be considered in administrative proceedings as part of the facts surrounding an investigation. Any statement provided by the employee may be used as evidence in criminal and/or administrative proceedings.

F. Kalkines Warning: At the commencement of a compelled investigatory interview, where prosecution has been declined by the appropriate authority, the Agency will provide an employee a warning that the employee's statements concerning the allegations during the interview cannot and will not be used against them in a subsequent criminal proceeding, unless the employee provides false statements or information; in which case, criminal proceedings may be instituted against the employee for falsifications. Refusal to answer or failure to respond truthfully to any questions may result in administrative disciplinary action.

~~Employees shall be given any warnings (Garrity warning) required by law to protect their constitutional privilege against self-incrimination in criminal proceedings. Refusal to respond to questions based on a proper invocation of the privilege against self-incrimination in a criminal proceeding may not be used as the sole basis for a disciplinary or adverse action.~~

G. ~~The Agency may determine, in circumstances potentially involving criminal misconduct, that it is necessary or desirable that employees being interviewed be required to respond to questions concerning misconduct or face disciplinary/adverse action, provided that the employees are informed that their answers cannot be used to incriminate them. In such cases, the Agency shall provide a Kalkines warning, orally and in writing, to the employee being investigated.~~
