Topic Discussed:
She is looking into the moss and lichen research in Oregon. She would like to come to Portland on March 7 to do some on-camera interviews for a national audience.
Is there someone with DEQ she could speak with about what is known so far and efforts underway to learn more about the contamination pockets? She wants to explore the "tip of the iceberg" theory --that this is a new way of measuring pollution and every city would have similar findings.

I will get back to her in the morning.
