Invitation to Participate in BDCP Working Groups

The California Natural Resources Agency has implemented a new outreach process to assist in the completion of a public draft Bay Delta Conservation Plan for formal public review and comment. The objective of the outreach process is to engage a broad array of stakeholders in the timely resolution of remaining BDCP issues. Given the level of public interest and work effort required, there are multiple ways for the public to engage: by participating in upcoming BDCP public meetings and by participating in or attending working group meetings. All meetings are open to the public.

Working Groups

A series of working groups are being developed to help resolve key issues in order to complete the draft BDCP. Click here to read the invitation to participate in the BDCP and learn how working groups are being organized, topics covered and general schedule of activities.

After reviewing the materials, please reply to working.groups@resources.ca.gov by midnight, May 27, to indicate your interest in participation in any of the working groups.

Notice of working group meetings and materials will be available on the BDCP website. Please check back weekly as the information will be updated frequently.

Public Meetings

The first of a series of public meetings will take place on June 15. Click here to view a preliminary meeting agenda. Public meetings will be held every four to six weeks to provide the public with information as the draft BDCP is developed.
