Subject: The Third National Climate Assessment of the U.S Global Change Research Program

Dear Colleagues:

This morning, the U.S. Global Change Research Program released the Third National Climate Assessment, the most comprehensive, authoritative, and transparent scientific report on U.S.

Climate impacts ever generated. The report confirms that climate change is affecting every region of the country and key sectors of the U.S. economy and society, underscoring the need to combat the threats climate change presents and increase the preparedness and resilience of American communities.

This link GlobalChange.gov will take you to the US GCRP website, where you may view the Assessment and other important information.

At 2:00pm ET today, the White House is hosting live-streamed stakeholder event. You may access the live-stream from a link in the Newsletter below.

About Us

The U.S. Global Change Research Program (USGCRP) coordinates and integrates Federal research on changes in the global environment and their implications for society. USGCRP began as a presidential initiative in 1989 and was mandated by Congress in the Global Change Research Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-606), which called for "a comprehensive and integrated United States research program which will assist the Nation and the world to understand, assess, predict, and respond to human-induced and natural processes of global change."

The National Climate Assessment (NCA) is conducted under the auspices of the Global Change Research Act of 1990, which requires a report to the President and Congress every four years that evaluates, integrates, and interprets USGCRP findings. The NCA aims to incorporate advances in the understanding of climate science into larger social, ecological, and policy systems, thereby providing integrated analyses of impacts and vulnerability, helping the Federal Government to prioritize climate science investments, and delivering science that can be used by communities throughout our Nation to plan for a more sustainable and environmentally sound future.
