Per quanto riguarda i Think tank, suggerirei:
Nomina energia (an independent research company that deals with energy and environmental issues, committed to understand energy markets and their short and long term trends. Nomisma Energia covers all issues concerning energy markets and environmental policies, in Italy and Europe, which extend from fossil fuels markets to renewable energies, from industrial and market regulation to development of new technologies, from international politics to local Energy planning.https://nomismaenergia.it/en/chi-siamo/). The managing director is one the leading experts on environmental issues in Italy and they have a pro-business approach that could match well Pruitt's approach.

Inoltre potresti suggerire di incontrare Confindustria (Confindustria is the main association representing manufacturing and service companies in Italy, with a voluntary membership of more than 150,000 companies of all sizes, employing a total of 5,440,125 people.
In 2017, in coincidence with the Italian presidency of the G7, Confindustria holds the presidency of the B7 and 3 weeks ago it organized the G7 business summit http://www.g7italy.it/en/summit/business-summit)

Baci!
