Hi Richard,

One of the session topics for next Wednesday is Supporting Nonpoint Source Implementation. The session will start with a panel of state staff from around the country, but roughly half of the hour will be dedicated to facilitated discussion. The first discussion question is, "How has the CWA 303(d) Program helped Nonpoint Source Program efforts to address nutrient-related problems?" Jim Havard thought that the Illinois River TMDL could be a good example in answering that question. Do you think there is something to that, and might you be willing to chime in about it when we get to that discussion question?
Thanks for considering it!

Best,

Adam
