Hi Gary,

Thanks for the note. We would be happy to set up a debrief of the entire G7 meeting next week, would Wednesday, May 15th, before noon sometime work for you?

Below is the draft write-up from France on the waste initiative, I haven't seen the final document go out but we can pass it along once we have it.

Taking into account the informal sector in the inclusive transition to sustainable waste management

The world is on a trajectory where waste generation will drastically outpace population growth by more than double by 2050. The global production of waste has doubled in the last decade, and it is expected to increase by 69% by 2025, especially in emerging countries. Only 50% of waste is collected on average in cities of developing countries while the other half is disposed of in open dump sites, burnt or dispersed in the environment. In many cities, in particular in developing countries, the informal sector constitutes a palliative to defective waste management which provides jobs and subsistence income to many. There would be a clear added-value to take an initiative to gather initiatives promoting an inclusive transition to sustainable waste management while limiting the negative externalities on vulnerable populations and mindful of a resource efficiency and/or circular economy approach. Such an initiative would be working on exchanges of experiences, by providing a platform for its members to exchange expertise, including expertise on financial and / or organizational (role of local authorities, NGOs, companies ...) issues as well as information and best practices on policies for taking into account the informal sector. The initiative would also aims at encouraging commitments of international financial institutions to take into account in their projects the social and human aspects of informal activities.

Canada, France, the European Union, Germany, Japan, the United Kingdom, the United States, Egypt, Fiji, Indonesia, Niger and Norway committed to launching this initiative for taking into account the informal sector in the inclusive transition to sustainable waste management.

Hi Brianna,

We were looking at the EPA press release on the G7 Environmental Ministers Meeting. Do you have any details on the Information Sector in the Inclusive Transition to Sustainable Waster Management discussion? It is referenced as something US supported. Of course, it would be terrific to have a de-brief session on all the topics raised in Paris. We are scheduled to see President Macron on July 3.

On the other hand, we can bring a good company with direct impact on the issue of plastics like 3M or Dupont or Sealed Air. On sustainable finance, we would probably reach out to different companies, like MetLife, JP Morgan or Santander. Citi is keeping a low profile. Will this be a separate event on financing or the same one? Need to start working on it soonest, of course.

For example, you had a great speaker from Citibank I believe at the EMM last year. Perhaps we could have someone like him invited to an event on sustainable finance (including water and infrastructure investment) that Canada is planning.
