Hi Nadtya,

You might find this interesting on banned pesticides. I had this comparison prepared last year.

I don't have a formal commitment with OCSPP. However, as you know, they have been providing some support related to Peru's request for information related to pesticide registration and pesticide risk assessment. I have detailed below what has happened since the initial request. FYI, I sent an email to Zoe to follow up on the last item and she said she has not responded to the Embassy and would consult with her team on a way forward. Let me know if you have questions.

Peru
Request on Pesticides and Risk Assessment Training

- The Peruvian Embassy in the U.S., representing Peru's National Agrarian Health Service (SENASA), requested information on various topics:
  - Registration of pesticides. As of November 2018, OPP responded that they were "exploring the best possible option for SENASA to submit these registrations to the EPA." As far as OITA knows, OPP has not followed up on this topic.
  - List of banned pesticides. OPP responded that EPA does not have any such list available. They provided info on a database available online to the public that stores all of our registered pesticide labels.
  - OPP also shared a link on pesticide risk assessments, which resulted in SENASA's interest to receive training on risk assessment from EPA in many areas mentioned in the document. SENASA would like to have a videoconference call in order to explore the viability to receive training this year. Regarding this request, in early February 2019, OITA suggested getting more detailed topic information regarding SENASA's training request. OPP agreed to send an email to the Embassy requesting that SENASA narrows down topics of interest (OITA offered to translate into Spanish for better clarity). At that time, OPP expressed to OITA that due to staffing constraints, they may only be able to provide 1-2 day discussions with delegations at Potomac Yard in which they cover an agenda with the identified needs. If SENASA can narrow down what these needs , OPP could work to put together a program custom tailored to them. However, as of 3/5, OPP had not responded to the Embassy.

The only thing I can think of is the request from Panama on monitoring pesticides on air. Per Steve DeVito's recommendation I requested clarification from Panama but have not heard back. So commitment has been made.

Subject: Meeting with OCSPP

Chad and Jane are scheduling an OITA coordination meeting with the AA/DAA of OCSPP as soon as their schedules permit. The new AA/OCSPP apparently has a lot of ideas about her international engagement now that she is confirmed.

Please prepare a few bullets on the current international commitments we have with OCSPP and any asks that we have for OCSPP.

We do not have the date of the meeting yet, but it would be ideal if we could discuss your input at our Senior Advisors meeting on Monday.

Thanks, Mark
