Got it. Thanks.

However, Lynda just informed me that she's cutting back on the length of Lee's input. But I will crosswalk "progress" if that sentence remains.

Don,

I left out a word on p.7:

All,

Lynda and I wanted you to see the near-final version of the briefing handout. It's now formatted in the style preferred by our front office and it reflects all the input we have received to date. In the interest of space and version control, we could not accommodate the full length of everyone's desired changes, but we have reached a reasonable accommodation/happy medium. That said, it's at ~10 pages and may shrink a bit before all is said and done. This is less of an invitation to make changes to the briefing handout, and more of a heads-up about the content of the briefing. However, if there is a critical change that you feel strongly about, please send me any specific edits (clearly marked) by 2 PM EST today (~1 hour). This timing will allow me to meet the deadline set by our front office.

Thanks.
