All,

We thank Matt for coming to meet with us in RTP on Tuesday where we had a very productive meeting that I will try to summarize below.

A key part of the discussion was Sarah Lanier's presentation of her analysis of where we thought sampling sites could be located for the upcoming RARE effort. She focused on federal, state, and local sites that would be potentially accessible for the collection of combined soil, surface water, and groundwater samples that are mainly along the major wind vectors (to the northeast and to the southwest) originating at the plant. She also included other potentially important sites in locations that would help provide detail in areas not represented by the major wind vectors.

Matt suggested that we organize these potential sampling points in a systematic way to specifically represent the various hypotheses that have been developed as a result of Sarah's ongoing analysis. Briefly, these would include the following:

It was an excellent meeting and we greatly appreciate Matt's time and expertise. His visit did a lot to help bring us together for this study. I may have missed some things in this brief summary so please let me know if there are other key points that need to be added to this overview.

In the end we agreed that we would work toward another group Skype meeting sometime in the next 2 -3 weeks where we would present a draft sample plan organized in a way that reflects the various hypotheses and needs discussed above.

Thank you all very much,

Andy
