A 73 year old male was hospitalized with symptoms from a spilled container of malathion in his garage. The symptoms reported by the 73 year old male were shortness of breath, cough, fever, and chills. The odor was first detected mid-November but the source (leaking malathion container) was not found until a week after the 73 year old male was hospitalized. After the source of the odor was discovered, emergency services were contacted and an ambulance was dispatched to transport four family members to received medical treatment for symptoms they were experiencing.
No Violations noted during the investigation.
