On April 6, 2017, the Kern County Department of Agriculture and Measurement Standards received a report of loss alleging damage to roses (field and container grown) caused by drift from a ground application of glyphosate made to an almond orchard. Symptoms on the roses include leaf curling, leaf distortion and discoloration. The claimant alleges the estimated loss could be as much as $300,000.

The Kern County Agricultural Commissioner's office continues to investigate the incident.
