Mike,

Great meeting with you today. I think we can move forward with scheduling these meetings once a month on the first Tuesday. If possible, could you also reach out to Patrick Hedger, the director of policy, at Freedom Works? We were in talks with him about doing a similar meeting with conservative groups. His email is phedger@freedomworks.org.

I've also cc'd my colleague Michael Abboud who is also a press secretary here.

Thanks and look forward to meeting with you in the future!

My apologies for the delay the budget and infrastructure release consumed my entire day. We will work to give your office more of a heads up if we go back to New Hampshire on a day when the Senate is not in session. As I noted earlier, we would be happy to arrange a visit w the Administrator and Senator. I have also copied our new Regional Administrator, Alex Dunn, who can assist as well.

While in New Hampshire, the Administrator is scheduled to meet with the Governors and tour a Super Fund site.

Please let me know if you have any other questions or wish to discuss further.

is my hope you can make outreach to the Hassan folks re: the scope and intent of the visit, esp. if there is a chance that the Administrator and the Senator will be in the state at the same time.

Subject: Administrator Pruitt Visits Wyoming Coal Country

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt is wrapping up a visit to California.

Administrator Pruitt Visits Wyoming Coal Country

Wright, Wyo. (March 29, 2018) - Today, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt visited Wyoming and toured the Black Thunder coal mine. Senate Environmental and Public Works (EPW) Committee Chairman John Barrasso (R-WY) and Senator Mike Enzi (R-WY) also took part in the tour.

"Wyoming has been blessed with tremendous natural resources that help power America, and today we saw that firsthand," said EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. "EPA is committed to working with America's energy producers as partners, not adversaries, to protect the environment and provide affordable energy to millions of Americans."

Administrator Pruitt along with Senators Barrasso and Enzi, Louise Carter-King (Mayor of Gillette) and Ralph Kingan (Mayor of Wright) took an in-depth tour of the Black Thunder coal mine, one of the largest in the country. Wyoming is the number one producer of coal in the country and is committed to reclamation and environmental stewardship. Administrator Pruitt brought the good news to State of Wyoming that the "war on coal" is over and provided an update on the proposed repeal of the Clean Power Plan (CPP).

"Today was a special opportunity to reiterate our shared commitment to Wyoming coal, oil, natural gas, and other resources that will power our American economy for generations to come," said U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY). "EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt saw firsthand the state-of-the-art coal operations taking place every day in Wyoming. Just as important, he met the hard working men and women who provide America with affordable and reliable power. Administrator Pruitt saw up close the impressive reclamation work being done at Wyoming's mines to protect and restore the environment. Carbon capture technology will also play an important role in keeping coal clean and sustainable for the future. I am glad that Administrator Pruitt got to visit the mine and this community. I am thankful to Black Thunder mine for hosting us and to Administrator Pruitt for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming."

"I appreciate Administrator Pruitt travelling to Wyoming, and my hometown, to see the best coal in the nation," said U.S. Senator Mike Enzi (R-WY). "I am glad we now have an Administration that is willing to work with our nation's energy producers. As the former Mayor of Gillette, I helped these mines get permitted and know firsthand their pristine environmental track record and the benefits they bring to the community."

"We were extremely pleased to have Administrator Pruitt, Senator Enzi, and Senator Barasso visit Black Thunder today," said Arch's President and Chief Operating Officer Paul A. Lang, . "We are enormously proud of the Black Thunder mine and the nearly 1,200 hardworking men and women that operate the mine in a safe, environmentally responsible and efficient manner. We appreciate the Administrator's interest in this crucial American energy resource and we're proud to have the opportunity to showcase our operation. We applaud the Trump administration and Administrator Pruitt's commitment to ensuring that there is a robust and vital role for coal in America's energy future."

Background:

Soon after the previous Administration issued the Clean Power Plan in 2015, 150 entities including 27 states, 24 trade associations, 37 rural electric co-ops, and three labor unions challenged the CPP, highlighting a range of legal and technical concerns. A few months later, the United States Supreme Court stayed the CPP, immediately halting implementation—the first time the Supreme Court had ever issued a stay to block the enforcement of a regulation after the D.C. Circuit refused to do so.

On March 28, 2017, Administrator Pruitt signed a notice indicating the EPA's intent to review the Clean Power Plan, in accord with the President's Energy Independence Executive Order. On October 16, 2017, the EPA proposed to repeal the CPP, proposing that it is not consistent with the Clean Air Act. EPA is now taking comment on that proposal and has extended the public comment period to April 26, 2018, and just completed a CPP listening session in Gillette, Wyo., which is part of Administrator Pruitt's commitment for the Agency to hear from the public.

Administrator Pruitt leads a roundtable discussion with Wyoming Senators Barrasso and Enzi at Black Thunder mine.

Administrator Pruitt tours Black Thunder mine facilities.

Administrator Pruitt, Sens. Barrasso, and Enzi overlook the coal seam at Black Thunder mine.

Sam: Just to get you something right-away I am sending this resume which is State Department centric; I will then send another resume which was more Agriculture, Natural Resources and Environment centric followed by a brief bio used here at the Environmental Protection Agency where I have a permanent position as Deputy Associate Administrator-Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations.

If you wish I can provide a cover letter targeting Under Secretary of Agriculture for Natural Resources and Environment. This letter would capture the 'Agent of Change' themes of my principles of conservation; fish; wildlife; land; water; grazing; timber; mining; fire; recreation; hunting; fishing; camping; national security; jobs; energy and restoration. All of my principles encompass those held by the President and our prospective Secretary of USDA, Governor Perdue.

As I said last night I would prepare well and consider it a privilege to undergo the process of Senate Confirmation and am confident that if confirmed, I would be of great value to the People; The Secretary and our tremendous President Trump who has shown us there are almost no limits to what good we can accomplish.

Sincerely,

Importance: High

Hi Jack- The Administrator looks forward to seeing you later today. Thanks for agreeing to lead the discussion. We'd prefer it to take place at the table, but you sit next to the Admin and interview him on the below questions. Let us know if you need anything and Stephen Gordon (cc'd) is working with Rob to arrive early and brief you on these questions/ address any concerns on your end. Thanks! -Tate

DE-REGULATORY AGENDA- In year one, EPA appears to have finalized 22 deregulatory actions, saving Americans more than $1 B in regulatory costs. The report also says that EPA has initiated work on over 44 deregulatory actions. Can you highlight some of your big-ticket accomplishments in this space?

CLEARING BACKLOGS-

a. AIR- With regards to Air, you have acted on 322 State Implementation Plans. Tell me about the situation you inherited before acting on those plans?

b. CHEMICALS- As of January 2017, there were 600 new chemicals stuck in EPA's backlog. Obviously this type of thing stifles innovation and job creation nationwide. Has that backlog been addressed and how are you ensuring chemicals receive timely safety determinations?

c. SUPERFUND- Unfortunately, the actual story of the work you ARE doing often goes untold by the media. Tell me about the progress you have made on cleaning up contaminated sites in your first year?

COOPERATIVE FEDERALISM-

In your first year, you consulted with 95 bipartisan Members of Congress, 34 Governors and visited over half the states and U.S. territories. You've also met with over 350 stakeholder groups.

How has this shaped your decision making on the de-regulatory agenda we just discussed?

PROSPECTIVE-

Any big announcements coming up in the near future from the agency?

OPEN UP FOR QUESTIONS-

Hey guys –

Just wanted to make sure you received a copy of EPA's Year in Review report outlining the actions Administrator Scott Pruitt spearheaded in his first year to clear backlogs across the agency (FOIA, new chemical reviews, SIPs, Superfund decisions, etc.) and save the American people $1 billion in regulatory costs. There's a lot of good stuff in there that pertains to your committees and I'm happy to chat if you have any questions!

Molly

To date, accomplishments include:

- DE-REG: EPA announced it would not finalize duplicative and unnecessary hardrock mining regulations under CERCLA
- AIR: Repealed CPP and returned power to the states by turning one Federal Implementation Plan (FIP) into a State Implementation Plan (SIP) each month; EPA's air office also ended "once in, always in"
- WATER: EPA rescinded the overreaching "Waters of the U.S." rule and cut the amount of time it took to review state water quality standards in half (from 120 to 60)
- LAND: Seven sites were removed from the NPL list last year, and – after decades of inaction, EPA put forth a plan to clean up the West Lake Landfill, a dumping ground for radioactive waste from the Manhattan Project.
- CHEMICALS: EPA is successfully meeting the deadlines set forth in the Lautenberg Chemical Safety Act, including clearing the new chemical backlog, releasing a fees rule and framework rules on prioritization, risk evaluation and inventory.
- ENFORCEMENT: In FY17, $1.6 billion was collected in administrative and judicial penalities, higher than any of the previous 10 years, other than the year that included one $5.6 billion action taken.

Please RSVP to Cari at Shiffman.cari@epa.gov by next Thursday. You can get into EPA with your government ID but you need to be on a list to get to the corridor where the Green Room is (next to the Administrator's office).

Administrator Pruitt unfortunately will be traveling.

Troy, Christian, and Carolyn,

Could you please provide EPA input on the following language as an option in place of current sections 2 and 3 of the RPM Act, S. 203? Thanks.

Elizabeth

Add new definition to Section 216 of Clean Air Act as Section 216(12):

Competition vehicle

The term "competition vehicle" means a vehicle that is used solely for competition, including a motor vehicle that was converted into a vehicle used solely for competition.

Add anti-tampering language to Section 203(a) of Clean Air Act:

No action with respect to any device or element of design referred to in paragraph (3) shall be treated as a prohibited act under that paragraph if the action is for the purpose of use on a competition vehicle or for the purpose of modifying a motor vehicle into a competition vehicle. A part or component manufactured, sold, offered for sale, or installed under the authority of the preceding sentence is to be used only on a competition vehicle or a motor vehicle being modified for use as a competition vehicle. If a competition vehicle is converted back into a motor vehicle, any parts or components described in the preceding sentence must be removed and the motor vehicle and all of its parts must be in compliance with regulations under this title.

Carolyn,

Can EPW resolve the nonprofit language issue by simply deleting the bill language that adds 501(c)(3)s and reinstating the language of 104(k)(3)(A)(ii) and (B)(ii) that authorize grants for both eligible entities and nonprofit organizations.

EPW is being told a bunch of existing grant recipients would lose their grants.

OLEM question.

Lizzy,

I wanted to invite you and the rest of the Barrasso EPW team to my ceremonial swearing in. It is not that big a deal, but the Green Room is nice and if you come early you can see my cavernous office. Please forward to the rest of the team.

Please RSVP to Cari at Shiffman.cari@epa.gov by next Thursday. You can get into EPA with your government ID but you need to be on a list to get to the corridor where the Green Room is (next to the Administrator's office).

Administrator Pruitt unfortunately will be traveling.

Thanks for taking the time today.

I just sent my edits on "augmenting agency resources" over to leg counsel. I'm also working on scheduling that meeting with Mary N, which I'll try to coordinate with you.

My top questions .....

1. Does the 24 month NEPA and the Augmenting Agency Resources as a free standing vehicle have a snow ball's chance?
2. Would you add any of the other aspects of Title VI, or just keep it tight?
3. What third rails do you see in Title VI?

Thanks a million!

Subject: Great response to Pruitt interview

EPA team --

Thank you for the wonderful opportunity to host Administrator Pruitt at Heritage's annual President's Club meeting last week. The Q&A was great. In fact, we thought it was so informative that we posted a transcript on The Daily Signal. I thought you'd appreciate the numerous positive emails we received in response (see below). Look forward to working with you again soon.

Take care,
Rob

Brannen E.
As the president would say I greatly enjoyed your Q&A with Scott Pruitt. Its truly refreshing to have common sense prevailing over bureaucratic lunacy. I hope the president has installed more people of Mr Pruitts caliber throughout all federal agencies. We need less bureaucrats and more efficiency. I send emails to my elected officials reminding them that bureaucrats should not be making laws of the land. If they do they shouldn't stand up in a court which means more common sense. Thanks for your time.

Clement M.
That was an incredible interview with an equally incredible public servant. I wish we could hear more things like that from the media. This is what the people need to know about making America great again. Thank you and keep up the good work.

Dan D.
Thank you for this article. It helped me to understand Mr Pruitt, and to clarify this administration's commitment to environmental quality with economy.

Just read your interview and I was Impressed. Sounds like our President made a great decision when he chose Scott Pruitt to lead the EPA!

Pat P.
The narrative of your interview with the EPA's Scott Pruitt contains such positive and frankly, hopeful information! I would like to share it with others. Is it possible to get a transcript of the interview I can share? I will definitely share a link to The Daily Signal and your interview, but I'd like to print a copy I can refer to in the future and share. Thank you for the work you do. It is so difficult to hear rational and truthful voices amid the clamor and liberal hysteria of most news outlets.

John L.
You spotlighted a diamond in so many ways that he looks like the diamond he is. Measure Trump by Gorsuch? Sure, he's promise. Measure Trump by Pruitt? Absolutely. This guy is gettting his job done, and the ripples of his results will change the USA for the better. Here's to a Darwin Dashboard in every Agency. Study that one. Thanks for a stellar job.

Bill W.

Excellent, thoughtful, informative interview. Keep up the good work Rob! With so much media noise and bias, I've become a scanner and headlines reader. Your article has encouraged me start reading Daily Signal for quality news.

Jared M.
Rob; I just read your piece with Mr pruitt, and I must say, I was very impressed. It is so nice to have some optimissim again! What a great interview!!! I am very impressed with Mr Pruitt and his straight forward answers. What a GOOD man!!! We need more articles like this on the Daily Signal!!! Keep up the good, no---Great work!!!

Roger P.
What an outstanding interview! I just finished reading it, and I'm so encouraged. The interview asked relevant, important questions, and the responses actually went to the issues. That is good information for the American people to know, that is, that our EPA Administrator actually has a well-conceived plan and is working diligently to carry it out.

George B.
Never done this before but thanks for a great interview. I'm going to try passing it around to those on the left as well as the right in an effort to win some minds. Great job, great journalism!

Nancy C.
Thank you for this report. It is important to me to understand Pruitt's thinking and actions regarding the complex issues facing his department and our country. I got more and better information from your writing than I have heard or read from any other news sources.

Senate Confirms William Wehrum to Lead EPA Air Office

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), praised the Senate's vote to confirm the nomination of William Wehrum to serve as assistant administrator for the Office of Air and Radiation at the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The Senate voted 49 to 47 to confirm Wehrum.

"Bill Wehrum is the right person to be the head of the Environmental Protection Agency's air office," said Barrasso. "The EPA's air office has been responsible for creating the agency's most punishing regulations. Bill Wehrum's three decades of environmental policy experience will be enormously helpful as he works to cut red tape, protect America's air, and allow our economy to grow."

Background Information:

On October 4, 2017, the EPW Committee held a hearing on Wehrum's nomination.

On October 25, 2017, the EPW Committee advanced Wehrum's nomination at a committee business meeting.

Hi Becky,

It was nice talking with you by phone earlier this evening! I just tried you at your house number you gave me, but got the answering machine. I understand it's late so we can talk tomorrow, but I did want to get you this information as soon as possible.

As we discussed, we had some out-of-town travel surface that needs to happen around the time of this event. It is now looking like we will be out of town that week of Dec 11. As I know your folks will be booking flights very soon, we are hoping that we could move the date of this event. I sincerely apologize for the inconvenience that this causes but I'm hopeful that we can still make this a great event with strong involvement.

In offering other dates that would work for us, we could do Dec 4 mid-afternoon, Dec 5, Dec 6, or Dec 7 afternoon. Would any of those dates work for you?

Please let me know. We really appreciate you working with us on this and can't wait to address the group. Thank you for understanding!

Ok, I will hold 2-3PM on Tues, Dec 12 for him to be at Heritage. As we get closer, we can identify staff that may be able to join as well and perhaps stay for a longer portion of the meeting. Let me know if you need anything as the date approaches.

Thank you!

I think Dec 12 would be better. I trust he can come to Heritage. Our goal will be about 40 leaders. Perhaps he can bring some of his top people who can stay longer. I need to reserve the room so will set that in motion. Thanks, Becky Norton Dunlop

Hello Becky,

I wanted to follow up on this. I'd be happy to schedule an hour-long session for you with Administrator Pruitt. How would Nov 7 work? 3-4PM would be a good time for us that day. Alternately, we could do Dec 12 in the afternoon.

Let me know which works best and I will hold that time.

Thank you!

Liz...would be very pleased to host a half-day meeting and discussion for Administrator Pruitt with 25-30 key leaders from around the country at Heritage before the end of the year. If you can arrange some dates that might be possible, I will proceed with locking down meeting details and sending invitations. Becky

Also, our team at EPA would be more than happy to schedule a call with DPI to discuss issues further. I am CCing Kelly Shenk who is the Regional Ag Advisor to help facilitate that call.

Hi Mike -- I wanted to make sure you received a copy of EPA's report outlining the actions EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt spearheaded in his first year to clear backlogs across the agency (FOIA, new chemical reviews, SIPs, Superfund decisions, etc.) and save the American people $1 billion in regulatory costs. Thank you – Liz

To date, accomplishments include:

- DE-REG: EPA announced it would not finalize duplicative and unnecessary hardrock mining regulations under CERCLA
- AIR: Repealed CPP and returned power to the states by turning one Federal Implementation Plan (FIP) into a State Implementation Plan (SIP) each month; EPA's air office also ended "once in, always in"
- WATER: EPA rescinded the overreaching "Waters of the U.S." rule and cut the amount of time it took to review state water quality standards in half (from 120 to 60)
- LAND: Seven sites were removed from the NPL list last year, and – after decades of inaction, EPA put forth a plan to clean up the West Lake Landfill, a dumping ground for radioactive waste from the Manhattan Project.
- CHEMICALS: EPA is successfully meeting the deadlines set forth in the Lautenberg Chemical Safety Act, including clearing the new chemical backlog, releasing a fees rule and framework rules on prioritization, risk evaluation and inventory.
- ENFORCEMENT: In FY17, $1.6 billion was collected in administrative and judicial penalties, higher than any of the previous 10 years, other than the year that included one $5.6 billion action taken.

Just to Wyoming press and it would be a general release. It includes a press RSVP, so we would know who is coming. Pruitt's visit will showcase the state's coal operations and environmental stewardship

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW) announced that Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt will visit coal country in Wyoming on March 29th. Pruitt's visit will highlight Wyoming's coal mining operations, as well as the state's commitment to reclamation, and environmental stewardship. Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal. The state accounts for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. Over 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

Chairman Barrasso and EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt Tour Wyoming Coal Mine

Pruitt's Visit Demonstrates a Shared Commitment to Wyoming Natural Resources Powering U.S. Economy.

Wyoming Senators Barrasso and Enzi welcome EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming coal country.

WRIGHT, Wyo. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso, chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), welcomed Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming coal country. Barrasso invited Pruitt to visit Wyoming. Pruitt's visit demonstrates a shared commitment to Wyoming natural resources powering the U.S. economy. Barrasso, Pruitt, and fellow Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi toured Black Thunder coal mine in Campbell County, Wyo.

Barrasso invited Campbell County Board of Commissioners Chairman Mark Christensen, Gillette Mayor Louise Carter-King, and Wright Mayor Ralph Kingman to join him on the tour.

"Today was a special opportunity to reiterate our shared commitment to Wyoming coal, oil, natural gas, and other resources that will power our American economy for generations to come," Barrasso said. "EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt saw firsthand the state-of-the-art coal operations taking place every day in Wyoming. Just as important, he met the hard working men and women who provide America with affordable and reliable power.

"Administrator Pruitt saw up close the impressive reclamation work being done at Wyoming's mines to protect and restore the environment. Carbon capture technology will also play an important role in keeping coal clean and sustainable for the future.

"I am glad that Administrator Pruitt got to visit the mine and this community. I am thankful to Black Thunder mine for hosting us and to Administrator Pruitt for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming," said Barrasso.

"It's important to be in Wyoming coal country to see firsthand how they protect and steward the abundant natural resources with which they've been blessed," said EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. "Sen. Barrasso is a strong partner in EPA's efforts to roll back the misguided policies of the past and provide regulatory clarity and certainty to the energy producers of Wyoming."

"I appreciate Administrator Pruitt travelling to Wyoming, and my hometown, to see the best coal in the nation," Enzi said. "I am glad we now have an Administration that is willing to work with our nation's energy producers. As the former Mayor of Gillette, I helped these mines get permitted and know firsthand their pristine environmental track record and the benefits they bring to the community."

Background Information:

Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal, accounting for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. More than 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

On March 27, 2018, the EPA held a listening session in Gillette, WY on the proposed repeal of the Obama administration's so-called Clean Power Plan regulation (CPP). On October 10, 2017, the EPA published a draft rule to repeal the CPP.

On March 22, 2017, Barrasso joined with Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse (D-RI) to introduce the Utilizing Significant Emissions with Innovative Technologies (USE IT) Act. The legislation is cosponsored by Sens. Shelley Moore Capito (R-WV) and Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND). The USE IT Act would support carbon utilization and direct air capture research. The bill would also support federal, state, and non-governmental collaboration in the construction and development of carbon capture, utilization, and sequestration (CCUS) facilities and carbon dioxide (CO2) pipelines.

EPA/TCEQ Statement on Controlled Ignition of Trailers at Arkema Facility in Crosby

WASHINGTON (September 3, 2017) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality released the following statement along with Unified Command regarding the decision to conduct a controlled ignition of remaining trailers at Arkema's facility in Crosby:

It is the understanding of personnel on the ground that the remaining trailers are at risk of catching fire over the next few days. Rather than risk additional damage to the facility or spreading into the surrounding area, the Crosby Volunteer Fire Department and the Harris County Fire Marshal's Office will perform a controlled burn of the material.

First responders are outside the evacuation zone, but remain in the area, for quick response to ensure the safety of the community around the facility.

We continue to monitor smoke and air quality, the potential for additional fires in the area, and have aerial assets ready to be deployed, as needed. Everyone in the area should follow the safety instruction of local authorities, specifically staying out of the evacuation zone, avoiding smoke and flood waters.

Additional Background:

As with all smoke, people can limit the potential for adverse health effects by limiting their exposure. This includes staying indoors with doors and windows closed and running the air conditioning (if possible) with the fresh intake closed. If it is absolutely necessary to be outdoors, try to move out of the plume of smoke and minimize heavy work, exercise, or children's playtime.

As of Sunday, Sept. 3, multiple trailers of organic peroxide caught fire following the refrigeration units being compromised by catastrophic flood waters. EPA has been sending aerial surveillance aircraft to test resulting smoke and continues to do ground-level air quality monitoring. EPA's plane instrumentation is capable of measuring 78 different chemicals, including peroxides. Neither testing methods found toxic concentration levels in areas away from the evacuated facility.

Local officials are maintaining a 1.5-mile area of evacuation to assure that the public is protected. Air monitoring has confirmed that this is sufficient based on current conditions and anticipated events.

The EPA and the TCEQ are providing direct support to incident commander Michael Sims of the Crosby Volunteer Fire Department and Chief Bob Royall of the Harris County Fire Marshal's Office, who are leading a coordinated local, state, and federal effort as part of the Unified Command to control the fire at the Arkema facility in Crosby.

Schedules are a mess. Looks like Heritage, us and CPI could be there tomorrow. Everyone wants to be there but we need more notice.

Should we give everyone a month notice and start in November?

Wanted to touch base about tomorrow's lunch. Rob Bluey (copied) has set us up at Heritage. He can send the specifics.

Per our conversation, we are limiting the attendees at the first meeting so we can continue to work out logistics and best people to attend. In addition to Heritage, we've invited Congressional Partnership Institute, Family Research Council and Diana Bannister who is part of CAP and works with a number of different organizations.

I've looped in Rob and Keith so we can try to answer any questions and you have their contact info.

Hello all – Please consider this quote from Chairman Barrasso. We will also put this quote out in a release from EPW after your announcement. Thank you!

"The Trump administration is listening to the people of Wyoming," said Barrasso. "Today's announcement that the EPA will hold a listening session in Gillette, on the impacts of the so-called 'Clean Power Plan,' demonstrates the administration's commitment to hear directly from the people who would have been hurt most by this punishing regulation. The Clean Power Plan would have meant lost jobs for energy workers in Gillette and across Wyoming. I am thankful to EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt for his leadership on this important issue."

Thanks,

Mike

Justin—

I wanted to give you a heads up that tomorrow the EPA will announce the intent to hold three additional CPP listening sessions in Gillette, Wyoming, Kansas City, Missouri and San Francisco, California. A date will not be announced, just the intent to hold these additional hearings. Would the Chairman be willing to provide a quote for this announcement?

We can work with you all to find a date that works for the Chairman.

Many thanks,

Hello all – Please consider this quote from Chairman Barrasso. We will also put this quote out in a release from EPW after your announcement. Thank you!

"The Trump administration is listening to the people of Wyoming," said Barrasso. "Today's announcement that the EPA will hold a listening session in Gillette, on the impacts of the so-called 'Clean Power Plan,' demonstrates the administration's commitment to hear directly from the people who would have been hurt most by this punishing regulation. The Clean Power Plan would have meant lost jobs for energy workers in Gillette and across Wyoming. I am thankful to EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt for his leadership on this important issue."

Thanks,

Mike

Justin—

I wanted to give you a heads up that tomorrow the EPA will announce the intent to hold three additional CPP listening sessions in Gillette, Wyoming, Kansas City, Missouri and San Francisco, California. A date will not be announced, just the intent to hold these additional hearings. Would the Chairman be willing to provide a quote for this announcement?

We can work with you all to find a date that works for the Chairman.

Many thanks,

Barrasso Statement on EPA Holding Listening Session in Gillette, Wyoming

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW) praised Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt's announcement that the agency would hold a listening session in Gillette, WY, on the repeal of the Obama administration's burdensome Clean Power Plan regulation. EPA announced that the dates and specific location of the listening session would be released in the coming weeks.

"The Trump administration is listening to the people of Wyoming," said Barrasso. "Today's announcement that the EPA will hold a listening session in Gillette on the impacts of the so-called Clean Power Plan, demonstrates the administration's commitment to hear directly from the people who would have been hurt most by this punishing regulation. The Clean Power Plan would have meant lost jobs for energy workers in Gillette and across Wyoming. I am thankful to EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt for his leadership on this important issue."

Background Information:

On October 10, 2017, the EPA published a draft rule to repeal the Clean Power Plan rule.

On March 28, 2017, President Trump signed an executive order promoting energy independence and economic growth. This executive order rescinded a number of the Obama administration's climate-related initiatives. It also directed the EPA and the Department of the Interior to review and – if appropriate – suspend, revise, or rescind regulations affecting the oil, natural gas, coal, nuclear, and electric-generation sectors of our economy. Barrasso attended the signing ceremony for the order.

The EPA already held a listening session on the repeal of the Clean Power Plan in West Virginia. The agency will also hold listening sessions in Kansas City, MO, and San Francisco, CA.

Chairman Barrasso and EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt Tour Wyoming Coal Mine

<image002.jpg>
Wyoming Senators Barrasso and Enzi welcome EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming coal country.

WRIGHT, Wyo. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso, chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), welcomed Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming coal country. Barrasso invited Pruitt to visit Wyoming. Pruitt's visit demonstrates a shared commitment to Wyoming natural resources powering the U.S. economy. Barrasso, Pruitt, and fellow Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi toured Black Thunder coal mine in Campbell County, Wyo.

Barrasso invited Campbell County Board of Commissioners Chairman Mark Christensen, Gillette Mayor Louise Carter-King, and Wright Mayor Ralph Kingman to join him on the tour.

"Today was a special opportunity to reiterate our shared commitment to Wyoming coal, oil, natural gas, and other resources that will power our American economy for generations to come," Barrasso said. "EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt saw firsthand the state-of-the-art coal operations taking place every day in Wyoming. Just as important, he met the hard working men and women who provide America with affordable and reliable power.

"Administrator Pruitt saw up close the impressive reclamation work being done at Wyoming's mines to protect and restore the environment. Carbon capture technology will also play an important role in keeping coal clean and sustainable for the future.

"I am glad that Administrator Pruitt got to visit the mine and this community. I am thankful to Black Thunder mine for hosting us and to Administrator Pruitt for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming," said Barrasso.

"It's important to be in Wyoming coal country to see firsthand how they protect and steward the abundant natural resources with which they've been blessed," said EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. "Sen. Barrasso is a strong partner in EPA's efforts to roll back the misguided policies of the past and provide regulatory clarity and certainty to the energy producers of Wyoming."

"I appreciate Administrator Pruitt travelling to Wyoming, and my hometown, to see the best coal in the nation," Enzi said. "I am glad we now have an Administration that is willing to work with our nation's energy producers. As the former Mayor of Gillette, I helped these mines get permitted and know firsthand their pristine environmental track record and the benefits they bring to the community."

Background Information:

Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal, accounting for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. More than 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

On March 27, 2018, the EPA held a listening session in Gillette, WY on the proposed repeal of the Obama administration's so-called Clean Power Plan regulation (CPP). On October 10, 2017, the EPA published a draft rule to repeal the CPP.

On March 22, 2017, Barrasso joined with Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse (D-RI) to introduce the Utilizing Significant Emissions with Innovative Technologies (USE IT) Act. The legislation is cosponsored by Sens. Shelley Moore Capito (R-WV) and Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND). The USE IT Act would support carbon utilization and direct air capture research. The bill would also support federal, state, and non-governmental collaboration in the construction and development of carbon capture, utilization, and sequestration (CCUS) facilities and carbon dioxide (CO2) pipelines.

Liz/Tate

Wanted to touch base about tomorrow's lunch. Rob Bluey (copied) has set us up at Heritage. He can send the specifics.

Per our conversation, we are limiting the attendees at the first meeting so we can continue to work out logistics and best people to attend. In addition to Heritage, we've invited Congressional Partnership Institute, Family Research Council and Diana Bannister who is part of CAP and works with a number of different organizations.

I've looped in Rob and Keith so we can try to answer any questions and you have their contact info.

Mike

Liz…would be very pleased to host a half-day meeting and discussion for Administrator Pruitt with 25-30 key leaders from around the country at Heritage before the end of the year. If you can arrange some dates that might be possible, I will proceed with locking down meeting details and sending invitations. Becky

Barrasso Statement on EPA Directive to End "Sue & Settle" Practices

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), released the following statement on the directive from Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt to end the "sue and settle" practices within the agency. In the past, EPA has entered into consent agreements that commit the agency to take actions at the behest of interest groups.

"EPA Administrator Pruitt's directive will increase transparency so that the agency makes policies that are fair and informed," said Barrasso. "The Environmental Protection Agency should not make regulations by settling lawsuits behind closed doors. Under the last administration, the EPA advanced its political agenda by abusing its authority and leaving states and Congress in the dark. The public deserves to know how its government is operating."

Tom,

Thank you for this email. I will make sure we get this in front of Scott immediately. We are working on the confirmation hearing tomorrow, but once we get past we indeed will do a full review, and this will be something we will be reaching out to you on. We will have to look at all options as we unwind many of the rules over the past few years.

I will be in touch.

Thanks

AH - Great to see you the other night. Thanks again. As we discussed, my client is interested in establishing contact with Scott Pruitt's office going forward in order to discuss the Greenhouse Gas Phase 2 rulemaking from October, 2016 where EPA adopted an unsupportable claim regarding its Clean Air Act jurisdiction. Attached is the two-page discussion about the law and EPA's interpretation, EPA's failure to appropriately exercise discretion, and the counterproductive nature of foreseeable outcomes including three more highway deaths annually.

We're sensitive to the concern and do not want to interfere with any momentum to get a legislative fix. That would be more durable and would provide greater certainty than a rulemaking could. That said we sent a draft proposed rule to OMB today to begin the interagency process but do not plan to move a proposed rule until we know whether legislation will not pass. Given the time it takes to get a proposed rule through OMB and into the federal register we could not wait until the end of month until after funding deadline passes to send proposal to OMB for it to get finalized in time to provide relief if needed. I heard from pork producers today and this was the message I shared with them. Our Ag advisor and his staff have been in contact with the other groups but again we are trying to support legislative process with the time and process limits we're facing.

To whom it may concern:

I'm the managing editor at the Gillette News Record, the daily newspaper in Gillette, Wyoming, and am looking for some information on a trip EPA Administrator Pruitt is reportedly making to our area next week, March 29. I inquired about it at the EPA's Denver office, which covers our region, but was directed here.

Could someone please call so we can arrange to have a reporter and photographer go along and report and chronicle Pruitt's visit? As the "Energy Capital of the Nation," you can understand that coal, policy and anything energy related is big news for our area and our readers. Also, it isn't everyday we get a visit from a high-ranking official like Mr. Pruitt.

Anyway, I'm looking forward to talking with someone further.

Thanks in advance for your time and assistance.

Wyoming Delegation Welcomes EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming Coal Country on March 29

Pruitt's visit will showcase the state's coal operations and environmental stewardship

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), announced that Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt will visit coal country in Wyoming on March 29. Barrasso, as well as Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi (R-WY) and Rep. Liz Cheney (R-WY), welcomed the news of Pruitt's trip.

"EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt is coming to Wyoming to meet the men and women who work to power America," said Barrasso. "His trip will be an excellent opportunity to showcase our world-class coal operations, cutting-edge energy research, and the great work being done by the people of Wyoming. I am thankful to Administrator Pruitt for his leadership and for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming."

"I am thrilled that EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt will be visiting Wyoming coal country," Enzi said. "In our community, it doesn't take long to understand how the coal industry is a source of reliable and affordable energy, a provider of high paying jobs and an amazing steward of the land. If a picture is worth a thousand words, being on the ground is worth more than a thousand pictures."

"I'm very pleased that Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt will be coming to Wyoming, the number one coal producing state in the country," said Cheney. "Administrator Pruitt has been crucial in fulfilling President Trump's commitment to end the Obama war on coal. During his visit, he will be able to see firsthand what coal country is capable of as we produce one of our national treasures - Powder River Basin coal."

Pruitt's visit will highlight Wyoming's coal-mining operations, as well as the state's commitment to reclamation and environmental stewardship. Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal, accounting for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. More than 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

The Wyoming delegation sent a letter to then President-elect Donald Trump inviting him to visit Wyoming to see its wide range of energy and natural resources.

Press interested in covering the event should contact Mike Danylak with the EPW Committee.

Thank you as well for the offer of your photographer as a pool on the tour. I really appreciate it. Space is limited, so it will need to be one of our staffers but they are a pretty good shot and have a high quality camera. I will be sure to let them know specifically to get shots of the Administrator with miners and mining activity.

Thank you again!

Thanks for the info and we definitely would like to participate in the press event, and would appreciate any photos of the tour (especially that include Pruitt with miners and/or mining activity going on).

I also would offer, if you want, our photographer to go along on the tour and take photos to act as as pool for the press as well.

I'll get back to you this afternoon with the names of our reporter and photographer. I would like to cover this myself, but we're on deadline to get the paper out at that time and I'm chained to the desk until that happens.

Thanks again.

Wyoming Delegation Welcomes EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming Coal Country on March 29

Pruitt's visit will showcase the state's coal operations and environmental stewardship

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), announced that Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt will visit coal country in Wyoming on March 29. Barrasso, as well as Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi (R-WY) and Rep. Liz Cheney (R-WY), welcomed the news of Pruitt's trip.

"EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt is coming to Wyoming to meet the men and women who work to power America," said Barrasso. "His trip will be an excellent opportunity to showcase our world-class coal operations, cutting-edge energy research, and the great work being done by the people of Wyoming. I am thankful to Administrator Pruitt for his leadership and for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming."

"I am thrilled that EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt will be visiting Wyoming coal country," Enzi said. "In our community, it doesn't take long to understand how the coal industry is a source of reliable and affordable energy, a provider of high paying jobs and an amazing steward of the land. If a picture is worth a thousand words, being on the ground is worth more than a thousand pictures."

"I'm very pleased that Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt will be coming to Wyoming, the number one coal producing state in the country," said Cheney. "Administrator Pruitt has been crucial in fulfilling President Trump's commitment to end the Obama war on coal. During his visit, he will be able to see firsthand what coal country is capable of as we produce one of our national treasures - Powder River Basin coal."

Pruitt's visit will highlight Wyoming's coal-mining operations, as well as the state's commitment to reclamation and environmental stewardship. Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal, accounting for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. More than 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

The Wyoming delegation sent a letter to then President-elect Donald Trump inviting him to visit Wyoming to see its wide range of energy and natural resources.

Press interested in covering the event should contact Mike Danylak with the EPW Committee.

Background Information:

On March 27, 2018, the EPA plans to hold a listening session in Gillette on the proposed repeal of the Obama administration's so-called Clean Power Plan regulation (CPP). On October 10, 2017, the EPA published a draft rule to repeal the CPP.

The EPA has already held listening sessions on the repeal of the CPP in Charleston, W. Va., and San Francisco, Calif.

On March 28, 2017, President Trump signed an executive order promoting energy independence and economic growth that rescinded a number of the Obama administration's climate-related initiatives. It also directed the EPA and the Department of the Interior to review and – if appropriate – suspend, revise, or rescind regulations affecting the oil, natural gas, coal, nuclear, and electric-generation sectors of our economy. Barrasso attended the signing ceremony for the order.

We have a two speakers who are interested in participating in the conference but cannot do the evening timeslot (correspondents dinner among other conflicts).

At this point I'm just connecting with your office to see if this is a remote possibility. I'm trying to make all the puzzle pieces work but if this is not plausible, no issue.

Please let me know.

Wanted to pass along this information from Arch about tour.

The security detail can trail the tour. Arch just has to provide the car and driver due to mine regulations. If that works on your end, I'll make sure there is an SUV and driver.

Hi Kelly and Kelsi,

Elizabeth Horner (CCed) from EPW reached out to me with a couple day of logistical questions on behalf of Chairman Barrasso about the mine tour.

She has also been talking to Arch so figured it would be best to connect her with you all who are finalizing the details to get everyone on same page.

Thank you!

The press can use their own pictures from the press avail but if there are shots from the tour itself, they would need to be OK'd

Wyoming Delegation Welcomes EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming Coal Country on March 29

Pruitt's visit will showcase the state's coal operations and environmental stewardship

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), announced that Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt will visit coal country in Wyoming on March 29. Barrasso, as well as Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi (R-WY) and Rep. Liz Cheney (R-WY), welcomed the news of Pruitt's trip.

"EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt is coming to Wyoming to meet the men and women who work to power America," said Barrasso. "His trip will be an excellent opportunity to showcase our world-class coal operations, cutting-edge energy research, and the great work being done by the people of Wyoming. I am thankful to Administrator Pruitt for his leadership and for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming."

"I am thrilled that EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt will be visiting Wyoming coal country," Enzi said. "In our community, it doesn't take long to understand how the coal industry is a source of reliable and affordable energy, a provider of high paying jobs and an amazing steward of the land. If a picture is worth a thousand words, being on the ground is worth more than a thousand pictures."

"I'm very pleased that Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt will be coming to Wyoming, the number one coal producing state in the country," said Cheney. "Administrator Pruitt has been crucial in fulfilling President Trump's commitment to end the Obama war on coal. During his visit, he will be able to see firsthand what coal country is capable of as we produce one of our national treasures - Powder River Basin coal."

Pruitt's visit will highlight Wyoming's coal-mining operations, as well as the state's commitment to reclamation and environmental stewardship. Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal, accounting for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. More than 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

The Wyoming delegation sent a letter to then President-elect Donald Trump inviting him to visit Wyoming to see its wide range of energy and natural resources.

Press interested in covering the event should contact Mike Danylak with the EPW Committee.

Background Information:

On March 27, 2018, the EPA plans to hold a listening session in Gillette on the proposed repeal of the Obama administration's so-called Clean Power Plan regulation (CPP). On October 10, 2017, the EPA published a draft rule to repeal the CPP.

The EPA has already held listening sessions on the repeal of the CPP in Charleston, W. Va., and San Francisco, Calif.

On March 28, 2017, President Trump signed an executive order promoting energy independence and economic growth that rescinded a number of the Obama administration's climate-related initiatives. It also directed the EPA and the Department of the Interior to review and – if appropriate – suspend, revise, or rescind regulations affecting the oil, natural gas, coal, nuclear, and electric-generation sectors of our economy. Barrasso attended the signing ceremony for the order.

Hey Mead – Thanks for chatting on the phone.

Here are the details for Thursday morning's press event on EPA Administrator Pruitt's Wyoming visit. EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt, Senator Barrasso, Senator Enzi, and other local officials will be touring Black Thunder Mine on Thursday morning. Due to limited space on the tour, we are holding a press availability at the mine, following the conclusion of their tour.

I recommend arriving at 10:50 AM at the mine. The availability will begin shortly after when they finish the tour. It will take place in the mine's administrative building.

Would love to have you cover it. I will also have pictures from the actual tour available for your use as well. I will be on site on Thursday – would love to meet in person.

Let me know if you have any questions. You can also call me at 202-699-0262.

Wyoming Delegation Welcomes EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming Coal Country on March 29

Pruitt's visit will showcase the state's coal operations and environmental stewardship

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), announced that Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt will visit coal country in Wyoming on March 29. Barrasso, as well as Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi (R-WY) and Rep. Liz Cheney (R-WY), welcomed the news of Pruitt's trip.

"EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt is coming to Wyoming to meet the men and women who work to power America," said Barrasso. "His trip will be an excellent opportunity to showcase our world-class coal operations, cutting-edge energy research, and the great work being done by the people of Wyoming. I am thankful to Administrator Pruitt for his leadership and for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming."

"I am thrilled that EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt will be visiting Wyoming coal country," Enzi said. "In our community, it doesn't take long to understand how the coal industry is a source of reliable and affordable energy, a provider of high paying jobs and an amazing steward of the land. If a picture is worth a thousand words, being on the ground is worth more than a thousand pictures."

"I'm very pleased that Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt will be coming to Wyoming, the number one coal producing state in the country," said Cheney. "Administrator Pruitt has been crucial in fulfilling President Trump's commitment to end the Obama war on coal. During his visit, he will be able to see firsthand what coal country is capable of as we produce one of our national treasures - Powder River Basin coal."

Pruitt's visit will highlight Wyoming's coal-mining operations, as well as the state's commitment to reclamation and environmental stewardship. Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal, accounting for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. More than 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

The Wyoming delegation sent a letter to then President-elect Donald Trump inviting him to visit Wyoming to see its wide range of energy and natural resources.

Press interested in covering the event should contact Mike Danylak with the EPW Committee.

Background Information:

On March 27, 2018, the EPA plans to hold a listening session in Gillette on the proposed repeal of the Obama administration's so-called Clean Power Plan regulation (CPP). On October 10, 2017, the EPA published a draft rule to repeal the CPP.

The EPA has already held listening sessions on the repeal of the CPP in Charleston, W. Va., and San Francisco, Calif.

On March 28, 2017, President Trump signed an executive order promoting energy independence and economic growth that rescinded a number of the Obama administration's climate-related initiatives. It also directed the EPA and the Department of the Interior to review and – if appropriate – suspend, revise, or rescind regulations affecting the oil, natural gas, coal, nuclear, and electric-generation sectors of our economy. Barrasso attended the signing ceremony for the order.

"Today was a special opportunity to reiterate our shared commitment to Wyoming coal, oil, natural gas, and other resources that will power our American economy for generations to come," Barrasso said. "EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt saw firsthand the state-of-the-art coal operations taking place every day in Wyoming. Just as important, he met the hard working men and women who provide America with affordable and reliable power.

"Administrator Pruitt saw up close the impressive reclamation work being done at Wyoming's mines to protect and restore the environment. Carbon capture technology will also play an important role in keeping coal clean and sustainable for the future," said Barrasso.

"I am glad that Administrator Pruitt got to visit the mine and this community. I am thankful to Black Thunder mine for hosting us and to Administrator Pruitt for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming."

"It's important to be in Wyoming coal country to see firsthand how they protect and steward the abundant natural resources with which they've been blessed," said EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. "Sen. EPA Chief Pruitt Visits Campbell County, Touts Importance of Coal Exports

The future of Powder River Basin coal lies overseas, something EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt stressed during a Thursday morning visit to the heart of Wyoming coal country.

As the guest of U.S. Sens. Mike Enzi and John Barrasso, both R-Wyoming, Pruitt toured Arch Coal's Black Thunder mine south of Wright, the second-largest producing thermal coal mine in the world.

Since being named to head the EPA shortly after President Donald Trump took office, Pruitt said his agency has been working to pull back after acting beyond its mission during the Barack Obama administration.

"We were overstepping. Now we're correcting it," he said. "We have a job to do and I think what's been done the last several years was not the job of the agency. They were picking winners and losers, using regulatory power to influence and penalize certain forms of energy to help others.

"That's not the job of the EPA."

He said regulations like the Clean Power Plan are more punitive than helpful.

I am sorry if I am coming across pushy, I really do appreciate working with you all at EPA. This visit is really important to the Chairman and we are trying to find ways to maximize the press value of the administrator's visit.

Hey Mike, I will call you first thing tomorrow. I just spoke with our folks. Have y'all chatted with the delegation folks? Also wondering what Monday morning (March 26) would look like for sending this out?

Our advance and scheduling folks have reiterated to me that time is super tight , so we need to discuss the gaggle. I think time is too tight so we might not be able to make it happen, but we might be able to do some press calls in the car or something.

Thanks again for your patience!

Chairman Barrasso to Welcome EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming Coal Country on March 29th

Pruitt's visit will showcase the state's coal operations and environmental stewardship

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW) announced that Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt will visit coal country in Wyoming on March 29th. Barrasso, as well as Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi (R-WY) and Rep. Liz Cheney (R-WY) welcomed the news of Pruitt's trip.

<<SPACE FOR BARRASSO QUOTE>>

<<SPACE FOR ENZI QUOTE>>

<<SPACE FOR CHENEY QUOTE>>

Pruitt's visit will highlight Wyoming's coal mining operations, as well as the state's commitment to reclamation, and environmental stewardship. Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal. The state accounts for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. Over 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

Yes, I just don't think the schedule is allowing us to do that. That's why I'm trying to think of another alternative – our scheduling team has told me it's tight. Also, if Sen Barrasso and Enzi want to do the press avail don't let us stop you! We might be able to make it work, it really depends on the flow of the day/tour and timing.

Hey Mike – just making sure you and your team saw our accomplishments report from yesterday. We've accomplished a lot in one year, and we'd love to have y'all's help in spreading the word.

At the outset of EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt's tenure, he set forth a "back-to-basics agenda" centered on returning EPA to its proper role via three objectives:

1. Refocusing the Agency back to its core mission
2. Restoring power to the states through cooperative federalism
3. Adhering to the rule of law and improving Agency processes

To date, accomplishments include:

- Halted Job-Killing, Burdensome, Duplicative Regulations
- Eliminated Agency Backlogs, Improved Efficiency
- Increased Transparency, Accountability
- Returned to Cooperative Federalism
- Restored the Rule of Law, Process
- Improved Compliance and Assistance

Hi Barnes-
On behalf of several environmental organizations, I would like to request a meeting with you and your staff in January to discuss EPA authorization of state CCR permit programs. We have several concerns regarding the process.
Is it possible to schedule a meeting for January 23 or 26? Jan 22 would be a third option, if the other two dates are not convenient.
Thank you in advance for your consideration and assistance with this request.

1. Tell us about your "Back 2 the Basics" campaign at the EPA. How did the EPA get stretched thin under the previous administration(s) and what programs within EPA will you be putting an emphasis on?

2. The EPA's Brownfields program has greatly benefited the state of Oklahoma. Here in Oklahoma City, where we are filming today, the program has made it possible for us to transform and revive the downtown area. Once abandoned buildings are now providing well-paying job opportunities and helping to grow our local economy. It's an excellent example of the public and private sector partnering together for the betterment of local communities. Can you tell us more about this aspect of the EPA and how you are looking to improve the program?

3. Congress passed legislation last year to reform the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA). You are the EPA administrator that will lead the implementation of this historic environmental regulatory reform. We had businesses in Oklahoma who wanted TSCA (TOSS-KAH) to be reformed to ensure consistency in chemical regulation for interstate commerce. Can you tell me how implementation is going so far? How do you expect it to help both the environment and the business community in the United States?

4. The Trump administration has called for a review of EPA regulations issued under the Obama administration, including the Clean Power Plan and Waters of the United States (WOTUS). What does this process look like for an agency to review rules that have already been finalized? Does this mean states and job creators will have a seat at the table again as you review these regulations and develop a path forward?

I wanted to touch base with you to see if Mr. Pruitt had any sort of introduction video clip he would like to have played before going on stage to give his remarks at Resource Bank 2017. We have some large video screens in the main session room and it could be a great way to give some background information on him, etc. before he takes the stage. The video should ideally be less than 3 minutes long; around the 2 minute mark is ideal.

If this is something you would be interested in, please use this link to upload the video directly: https://www.dropbox.com/sh/8lh69vnucr5wmks/AADMQ2c7M-zyFSA3CE9b8UnFa?dl=0. Subject: Resource Bank Address Timeline

Hi Millan,

Following up on our conversation earlier this week, attached is a detailed timeline of the dinner event Administrator Pruitt is speaking at next week. In addition, below is a detailed overview of the presentations:

Rep. Jordan should speak for 10 minutes (before dinner). Administrator Pruitt should speak for 10 minutes, and will speak after the main course. After Pruitt, John Malcolm will come up and Rep. Jordan will return to the stage for a moderated Q&A led by John Malcolm (the Heritage Foundation).

The topic: Why And How We Can Limit The Federal Government

Rep. Jordan should draw from his time as a leader in the Ohio State House as well as his work in the Congress to explain the need to limit the government, the frustrations in moving in this direction, and an idea of the way forward. The recent AHCA and Omnibus are good illustrations. And it might be good to let them know about a few upcoming issues. The audience is made up of leaders of think tanks, policy experts and donors. The theme of the conference is "Rise to the Challenge." He should definitely give the audience a stake in the fights ahead and some suggestions of what they can do to help turn the country around.

Administrator Pruitt's experience in the states as a leader among the attorneys general will also bring an added perspective to his comments. He should remind the audience of some of the fights he was engaged in with the Obama Administration (and just how bad it was). His selection as EPA Administrator (and maybe mention Sen. Sessions as AG and others now in the Administration who have fought hard to rollback and contain the power of the federal government) should give us hope. The Paris Climate Agreement is one area the audience will be interested in hearing about. The Executive Orders and review of regulations are other ways the Administration is beginning to turn the corner.

Both can speak as allies who have looked at Washington as a problem. They have led in the states. They have taken the federal government to court. They inspire others to do the same.

John Malcolm's moderated Q&A will be more of a conversation to draw out some of these themes, point out the different roles the states and Congress have in these fights and tease out a few of the ideas of the way forward.

Question: can you confirm if the administrator prefers a lav or podium mic for his remarks? Please let me know if you have any questions or concerns with this information.

Sincerely,

Jessica

Questions for Scott Pruitt

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <![endif]-->Scott, I think it fair to say that you were viewed, and perhaps are still viewed, with a healthy degree of skepticism, if not downright distrust, by the career folks at the EPA when you walked through the door. After all, until recently, you were active in suing the agency you now head. How have the career people responded to you now that you are there, and how have you navigated the difficult path of assuring them that you will continue to do what is necessary to protect the environment, while at the same time cutting back on some of the excesses of past administrations?

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <![endif]-->What are going to be your top priorities as EPA administrator?

<!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <![endif]-->The EPA has for years taken a very aggressive stand on how broadly the Endangered Species Act applies, including to species that are both non-commercial and wholly intrastate. Critics have argued that this exceeds the federal government's authority under the Commerce Clause to regulate, a position you were sympathetic to as Oklahoma Attorney General. How do you approach such issues now, and is there any prospect that the EPA will realign its regulatory regime to conform with a more traditional view of the constitutional limitations imposed by the Commerce Clause?

<!--[if !supportLists]-->4. <![endif]-->One issue that came up a lot during the Gorsuch confirmation hearings was the Chevron doctrine, and Senators Mike Lee and Ben Sasse have introduced the Separation of Powers Restoration Act to overturn the Chevron decision. What are your views of the Chevron doctrine? How much deference do you think courts should give to agencies such as the EPA when it comes to interpreting of arguably ambiguous laws as well as their own regulations?

<!--[if !supportLists]-->5. <![endif]-->One hears rumors that there are robust discussions going on behind the scenes on such issues as how to re-write the Waters of the United States Rule in the Clean Water Act, whether and how to cut back on costly ethanol mandates and greenhouse gas emission limits, and whether to withdraw from the Paris Climate Agreement. What insights can you offer to us about that process is going and, without naming names, what concerns are people raising during those discussions?

<!--[if !supportLists]-->6. <![endif]-->Can you provide a few examples of EPA environmental regulations that you think are necessary to achieve the goals of the environmental protection laws and some examples of EPA regulations that may not be necessary to achieve those goals?

I will get in touch with you once we are on site.

Subject: Pruitt questions

Lincoln, thanks for your call. Here are the questions for tomorrow. Probably won't have time for all of them.

Yesterday, you issued a directive to get rid of the abusive sue and settle process at the EPA in which special interests develop policy with agencies behind closed doors. Could you explain what your directive on the issue does?

The left has defined environmentalism in a way that's often at odds with freedom, conservation, and even science. What do you consider true environmentalism?

The media portrays former President Barack Obama as an environmental hero, while you're often characterized as a villain. What's most frustrating about the media's coverage of you and the EPA under President Trump?

At Heritage, we have done a lot of work on the "Waters of the United States" (WOTUS) rule and are working to properly define what "navigable waters" should be under the Clean Water Act. What are your goals as you conduct a re-evaluation?

What are the implications of doing away with the Clean Power Plan? What are the next steps?

The Clean Power Plan was one of the most egregious overreaches of the federal government into traditionally state and local government functions. Obviously, there were states both opposed to and in favor of policies like the Clean Power Plan. What role do you see states playing in the new EPA, not just in this issue but across the board?

What's next on the EPA's agenda? There are certainly other egregious regulations on the books, like New Source Performance Review, that need to be addressed.

The EPA's impact on the lives of Americans and businesses is outsized compared to its relatively small budget. What do you see as the principle functions of the EPA?

Where does Congress need to engage more regarding environmental issues and EPA's mission?

What's an issue EPA is engaged in that isn't getting the attention outside of the agency it deserves?

How would you like people to remember Scott Pruitt's legacy as EPA administrator?

Millan,

I wanted to let you know that we will have Rob Bluey, Heritage's Senior VP of Communications and Editor in Chief of The Daily Signal, our multimedia news team facilitate the interview. Who should I connect Rob to in advance of the meeting to help identify key questions and topics for Administrator Pruitt to address?

Amy - should Mr. Pruitt's remarks be open or closed to press? If open, would you be comfortable with our team using Facebook live to cover the conversation?

We also would like to push out an email blast to invitees announcing his participation. Is the attached language acceptable? The blasts will contain the invitee's first name opposed to the language "Dear Fellow Conservative".

Thank you,
Lauren

Lauren,

Thank you so much for accommodating us and for your patience. The luncheon address sounds wonderful and he was humbled when he heard that you all had been so kind as to extend an invitation to speak.

FORMAT: He really enjoys the fireside chat format.

Q&A: The notecard option would be best if we can arrange it that way.

Length: The former is great.

Schedule: Your preference works for us. He typically does not eat so we may have him arrive as they are finishing up. Although, if he were seated with folks with whom you would like for him to interact, we can arrange for him to be there in time for the meal.

Press: I will defer to our press team, Amy Graham, copied on this email.

Millan,

Wonderful! Thank you so much.

I think the luncheon address would be perfect for the Administrator.

A few quick logistics items:

? FORMAT: We can do a stand alone speech or interview style- whichever is his preference.
? Q&A: Is this something Mr. Pruitt would be willing to do? We can do live mic Q&A or could run this aspect where guests pen their questions on notecards/text them in and we sort and filter what is asked
? LENGTH: Typically the flow is 15 minutes of remarks/interview and 25 minutes of Q&A or 20 minutes of remarks/interview and 25 minutes of Q&A
? SCHEDULE: Our preference would be to do meal first, then remarks and Q and A. If that does not work with his schedule we can switch and do remarks and Q&A first – we've had to do this with Congressional votes so we can certainly adjust.
? PRESS: Would you like this to be opened to the press or closed? If open, are you comfortable with us utilizing Facebook Live during his remarks?

I look forward to working with you and Administrator Pruitt's team on this!

Lauren

Would you have availability to discuss the possibility of his participation this afternoon? I can provide a bit more context about the conference and let you know where the agenda currently stands.

Please let me know. Thank you,

Hello Jaclyn,

I understand that you are the scheduler for Senator Lankford. I work in Administrator Pruitt's office and wanted to confirm lunch for Wednesday at 12PM at the WH Mess. I've submitted a reservation request. Do you know if anyone will be joining the Senator? Our COS Ryan Jackson may be attending, but I'm not positive. The Administrator and Ryan have badges and do not need to go through WAVES, but I'm not sure about Congressmen. If you need to submit that information, I can send it along for you. It would be the info below (you may already know this, so I apologize if you do)!

Subject: RE: Follow up to your invitation for Administrator Pruitt

Millan,

I wanted to let you know that we will have Rob Bluey, Heritage's Senior VP of Communications and Editor in Chief of The Daily Signal, our multimedia news team facilitate the interview. Who should I connect Rob to in advance of the meeting to help identify key questions and topics for Administrator Pruitt to address?

Amy - should Mr. Pruitt's remarks be open or closed to press? If open, would you be comfortable with our team using Facebook live to cover the conversation?

We also would like to push out an email blast to invitees announcing his participation. Is the attached language acceptable? The blasts will contain the invitee's first name opposed to the language "Dear Fellow Conservative".

Thank you,
Lauren

Lauren,

Thank you so much for accommodating us and for your patience. The luncheon address sounds wonderful and he was humbled when he heard that you all had been so kind as to extend an invitation to speak.

FORMAT: He really enjoys the fireside chat format.

Q&A: The notecard option would be best if we can arrange it that way.

Length: The former is great.

Schedule: Your preference works for us. He typically does not eat so we may have him arrive as they are finishing up. Although, if he were seated with folks with whom you would like for him to interact, we can arrange for him to be there in time for the meal.

Press: I will defer to our press team, Amy Graham, copied on this email.

Millan,

Wonderful! Thank you so much.

I think the luncheon address would be perfect for the Administrator.

A few quick logistics items:

? FORMAT: We can do a stand alone speech or interview style- whichever is his preference.
? Q&A: Is this something Mr. Pruitt would be willing to do? We can do live mic Q&A or could run this aspect where guests pen their questions on notecards/text them in and we sort and filter what is asked
? LENGTH: Typically the flow is 15 minutes of remarks/interview and 25 minutes of Q&A or 20 minutes of remarks/interview and 25 minutes of Q&A
? SCHEDULE: Our preference would be to do meal first, then remarks and Q and A. If that does not work with his schedule we can switch and do remarks and Q&A first – we've had to do this with Congressional votes so we can certainly adjust.
? PRESS: Would you like this to be opened to the press or closed? If open, are you comfortable with us utilizing Facebook Live during his remarks?

I look forward to working with you and Administrator Pruitt's team on this!

Hi Becky,

It was nice talking with you by phone earlier this evening! I just tried you at your house number you gave me, but got the answering machine. I understand it's late so we can talk tomorrow, but I did want to get you this information as soon as possible.

As we discussed, we had some out-of-town travel surface that needs to happen around the time of this event. It is now looking like we will be out of town that week of Dec 11. As I know your folks will be booking flights very soon, we are hoping that we could move the date of this event. I sincerely apologize for the inconvenience that this causes but I'm hopeful that we can still make this a great event with strong involvement.

In offering other dates that would work for us, we could do Dec 4 mid-afternoon, Dec 5, Dec 6, or Dec 7 afternoon. Would any of those dates work for you?

Please let me know. We really appreciate you working with us on this and can't wait to address the group. Thank you for understanding!

Hayley...we would like to know if Henry Darwin can attend with the Administrator. We don't know him but would like to. Also, who else might be accompanying him, Liz? James Hewitt? The Heritage building on Pennsylvania Ave SE is at 227 Pennsylvania Ave SE. We are expecting about 25 leaders to attend and are confirming with them now. Once confirmed, we will forward the list to you. The set-up will be a hollow square and our goal will be for attendees to introduce themselves to the Administrator and say "in one breath" what their area of work is and their key issue of interest. Then he can speak about his goals and we can have a brief although important exchange. I will chair the meeting. Many thanks for your work on this. Becky Norton Dunlop

Hi Becky,

It was nice talking with you by phone earlier this evening! I just tried you at your house number you gave me, but got the answering machine. I understand it's late so we can talk tomorrow, but I did want to get you this information as soon as possible.

As we discussed, we had some out-of-town travel surface that needs to happen around the time of this event. It is now looking like we will be out of town that week of Dec 11. As I know your folks will be booking flights very soon, we are hoping that we could move the date of this event. I sincerely apologize for the inconvenience that this causes but I'm hopeful that we can still make this a great event with strong involvement.

In offering other dates that would work for us, we could do Dec 4 mid-afternoon, Dec 5, Dec 6, or Dec 7 afternoon. Would any of those dates work for you?

Please let me know. We really appreciate you working with us on this and can't wait to address the group. Thank you for understanding!

Ok, I will hold 2-3PM on Tues, Dec 12 for him to be at Heritage. As we get closer, we can identify staff that may be able to join as well and perhaps stay for a longer portion of the meeting. Let me know if you need anything as the date approaches.

Hello Becky,

I wanted to follow up on this. I'd be happy to schedule an hour-long session for you with Administrator Pruitt. How would Nov 7 work? 3-4PM would be a good time for us that day. Alternately, we could do Dec 12 in the afternoon.

Let me know which works best and I will hold that time.

Dear All,

I hope you had an enjoyable weekend. As an FYI, I wanted to make you aware of the government reform working group at The Heritage Foundation. It is a small group of Hill, administration, and Heritage staff aimed at examining and facilitating the ongoing government reorganization efforts, as related to the President's Executive order. It is a private, off-the-record discussion.

The first meeting will be Thursday September 14th at 12:30 pm at Heritage. George Nesterczuk (former OPM director nominee) will provide his insight and suggestions, followed by questions and an open discussion of each committee's current and intended efforts related to government reorganization.

If this initiative is of interest to you, please feel free to join us Thursday.

Best,

As promised, directions to the WH Mess below. Administrator Pruitt and one staff member will meet Mrs. James and her guest (if any) at the Mess at 12PM on Jan 16. And just a reminder to send the information for WAVES a few days prior. Thank you!

Directions to WH Mess
You can enter through the White House guard gate located at 17th & State. You will walk straight until you hit a second guard gate on your left. That gate will direct you to the Mess. Once in the Mess, you can let the host know that you are there to dine with the Administrator and they will direct you to his table.

I am out of the office today but will send directions to the Mess when I am back in tomorrow.

Thank you!

Hi Angela,

I hope you had a wonderful holiday! I wanted to loop back around to you and extend an invitation to Kay to join Administrator Pruitt for lunch at the WH Mess this month if she's available to get to know one another. Would Jan 8 at 12PM, Jan 16 at 12PM, or Jan 18 at 12PM work for her schedule? The Administrator will also likely bring a staff member, so she can feel free to bring one as well.

Thanks and hope to get them together soon!

Dear Hayley,

It was a real pleasure meeting you Friday at The Heritage Foundation. I hope you enjoyed Mr. Meese's insights and the opportunity to connect with your fellow liaisons. We will be hosting a similar event sometime in the near future and will certainly include you on the invite list.

Please reach out to us if we can be helpful at all in your endeavors, whether it be staffing recommendations, policy support or even to host an off-site retreat for your team.

Kind regards,

Dear Hayley,

I wanted to personally reach out and invite you to a luncheon with your fellow White House Liaisons featuring former Reagan Attorney General Edwin Meese.

The lunch will provide an off-the-record opportunity to hear General Meese share his experience working to staff the Reagan Administration.

This private lunch is being held at The Heritage Foundation on Friday August 18th at 12:30 pm.

If you are able to join us, please RSVP to me at sean.mcmahon@heritage.org or (202) 608-6205.

Yes, informally, I can also share that he is giving informal and general guidance, but not direction. For example, he is not directing any OCSPP staff to do anything as the head of that office. He is simply a Senior Advisor to the Administrator and is sitting in on internal briefings, giving general guidance, getting up to speed on broad Agency policy issues, etc. He is not leading OCSPP staff meetings, but he is sitting in on them, just as an advisor may do.

Let me know if we can provide any other info that would be helpful.

Senior Advisor to the Administrator and he's within Office of the Administrator (sitting and working), not OCSPP.

I have added our WH liaison, Hayley Ford, who has advised that this is not for public release but the Chairman can cite.

Hayley, any other insights?

Please let me know if there is anyway Heritage can help in your work. I hope that you find the legal memo useful.

Would you mind helping me identify someone at the Corps who I can reach out to?

Are you working closely with anyone at the Corps on this project? I haven't been able to trace any political appointees there.

Michelle,

Good morning and thank you for the follow up! I have re-attached the original invitation to the Administrator. We also added an additional invitation understanding April may not work. We would like to extend an invitation for Mr. Pruitt to join us on May 11 at Heritage's Resource Bank Meeting. This meeting takes place at the Broadmoor in Colorado Springs, CO. We would like him to speak at dinner on May 11 if available. Resource Bank is an annual event Heritage hosts for our coalition partners. Resource Bank brings together folks from the entire conservative movement.

Please let me know if y'all have any questions about the Annual Leadership Conference or Resource Bank. We would love to see the Administrator speak at one of these events if it works with his schedule.

Dear Sydney,

As a follow up to Administrator Pruitt's conversation with Mr. Meese, I wanted to provide you with the speaking invitation details for Heritage's 40th Annual Resource Bank Meeting.

Our Resource Bank Meeting brings together about 500 leaders, influencers, and donors from across the conservative movement to talk about powerful ideas, innovative strategies, and effective marketing. This year's meeting will be held May 10-12 at The Broadmoor in Colorado Spring. Our theme is "Rise to the Challenge," and we think that Commissioner Pruitt would be a very inspiring speaker during our Robert H. Krieble Dinner on Thursday, May 11.

We are happy to cover travel and hotel costs, and I am happy to answer any questions you might have about logistics, other speakers, the topic, and our audience.

Best,
Bridgett Wagner

Hi Millan,

Following up on our conversation earlier this week, attached is a detailed timeline of the dinner event Administrator Pruitt is speaking at next week. In addition, below is a detailed overview of the presentations:

Rep. Jordan should speak for 10 minutes (before dinner). Administrator Pruitt should speak for 10 minutes, and will speak after the main course. After Pruitt, John Malcolm will come up and Rep. Jordan will return to the stage for a moderated Q&A led by John Malcolm (the Heritage Foundation).

The topic: Why And How We Can Limit The Federal Government

Rep. Jordan should draw from his time as a leader in the Ohio State House as well as his work in the Congress to explain the need to limit the government, the frustrations in moving in this direction, and an idea of the way forward. The recent AHCA and Omnibus are good illustrations. And it might be good to let them know about a few upcoming issues. The audience is made up of leaders of think tanks, policy experts and donors. The theme of the conference is "Rise to the Challenge." He should definitely give the audience a stake in the fights ahead and some suggestions of what they can do to help turn the country around.

Administrator Pruitt's experience in the states as a leader among the attorneys general will also bring an added perspective to his comments. He should remind the audience of some of the fights he was engaged in with the Obama Administration (and just how bad it was). His selection as EPA Administrator (and maybe mention Sen. Sessions as AG and others now in the Administration who have fought hard to rollback and contain the power of the federal government) should give us hope. The Paris Climate Agreement is one area the audience will be interested in hearing about. The Executive Orders and review of regulations are other ways the Administration is beginning to turn the corner.

Both can speak as allies who have looked at Washington as a problem. They have led in the states. They have taken the federal government to court. They inspire others to do the same.

John Malcolm's moderated Q&A will be more of a conversation to draw out some of these themes, point out the different roles the states and Congress have in these fights and tease out a few of the ideas of the way forward.

Question: can you confirm if the administrator prefers a lav or podium mic for his remarks? Please let me know if you have any questions or concerns with this information.

Sincerely,

Jessica

Dear Sydney,

As a follow up to Administrator Pruitt's conversation with Mr. Meese, I wanted to provide you with the speaking invitation details for Heritage's 40th Annual Resource Bank Meeting.

Our Resource Bank Meeting brings together about 500 leaders, influencers, and donors from across the conservative movement to talk about powerful ideas, innovative strategies, and effective marketing. This year's meeting will be held May 10-12 at The Broadmoor in Colorado Spring. Our theme is "Rise to the Challenge," and we think that Commissioner Pruitt would be a very inspiring speaker during our Robert H. Krieble Dinner on Thursday, May 11.

We are happy to cover travel and hotel costs, and I am happy to answer any questions you might have about logistics, other speakers, the topic, and our audience.

Best,
Bridgett Wagner

Hi Sydney,

Thank you again for all your help confirming Administrator Pruitt for our Resource Bank Meeting a few weeks ago in Colorado Springs.

We just got the videos back from our videographer of the keynote speeches, and wanted to request permission to share the video of his remarks with attendees.

Can you let me know if this is approved?

Thank you!

Hi Kell,

Thanks for speaking with representatives from the BF Goodrich site recently. We really appreciated it.

I did want to pass along that I spoke with Sen. Paul on the EPA proposal and constituent feedback on it, and he wanted me to reach out to pass along our support for a comment period extension. We don't have a requested length of extension, but as far as I understand, Polyone would propose a three-month extension, and Westlake would propose a one-month extension. I understand the urgency of the issue and Administrator's Pruitt's rightful concerns on actually addressing these sites, which is much appreciated. I just wanted to pass this request on to you on behalf of the constituent companies in case you are able to consider any kind of extension. Please let me know if you need a formal letter or anything else—and my phone number is 202-224-6515 if needed.

Thank you for your consideration.

I hope you are well! My apologies for the delay in passing this along, there were a few items which needed to be worked out. It was nice speaking with you on the phone earlier, and glad to have you safely back up in Washington from your time in the eye of the storm.

Anyways, Heritage hosts a working group comprised of like-minded organizations examining improper or inefficient expenditures of government funds.

I wanted to invite you to come join us and share with our group the work you have been doing in reviewing EPA grants this Thursday at 12:00. Lunch will be served and it is a widely-attended event. Heritage is located at 214 Massachusetts Ave NE.

I know this is now a last-minute notice so if this time no longer works, we would be happy to invite you to join us next month as well.

Wyoming Senators Barrasso and Enzi welcome EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming coal country.

WRIGHT, Wyo. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso, chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), welcomed Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt to Wyoming coal country. Barrasso invited Pruitt to visit Wyoming. Pruitt's visit demonstrates a shared commitment to Wyoming natural resources powering the U.S. economy. Barrasso, Pruitt, and fellow Wyoming Sen. Mike Enzi toured Black Thunder coal mine in Campbell County, Wyo.

Barrasso invited Campbell County Board of Commissioners Chairman Mark Christensen, Gillette Mayor Louise Carter-King, and Wright Mayor Ralph Kingman to join him on the tour.

"Today was a special opportunity to reiterate our shared commitment to Wyoming coal, oil, natural gas, and other resources that will power our American economy for generations to come," Barrasso said. "EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt saw firsthand the state-of-the-art coal operations taking place every day in Wyoming. Just as important, he met the hard working men and women who provide America with affordable and reliable power.

"Administrator Pruitt saw up close the impressive reclamation work being done at Wyoming's mines to protect and restore the environment. Carbon capture technology will also play an important role in keeping coal clean and sustainable for the future.

"I am glad that Administrator Pruitt got to visit the mine and this community. I am thankful to Black Thunder mine for hosting us and to Administrator Pruitt for accepting my invitation to come to Wyoming," said Barrasso.

"It's important to be in Wyoming coal country to see firsthand how they protect and steward the abundant natural resources with which they've been blessed," said EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. "Sen. Barrasso is a strong partner in EPA's efforts to roll back the misguided policies of the past and provide regulatory clarity and certainty to the energy producers of Wyoming."

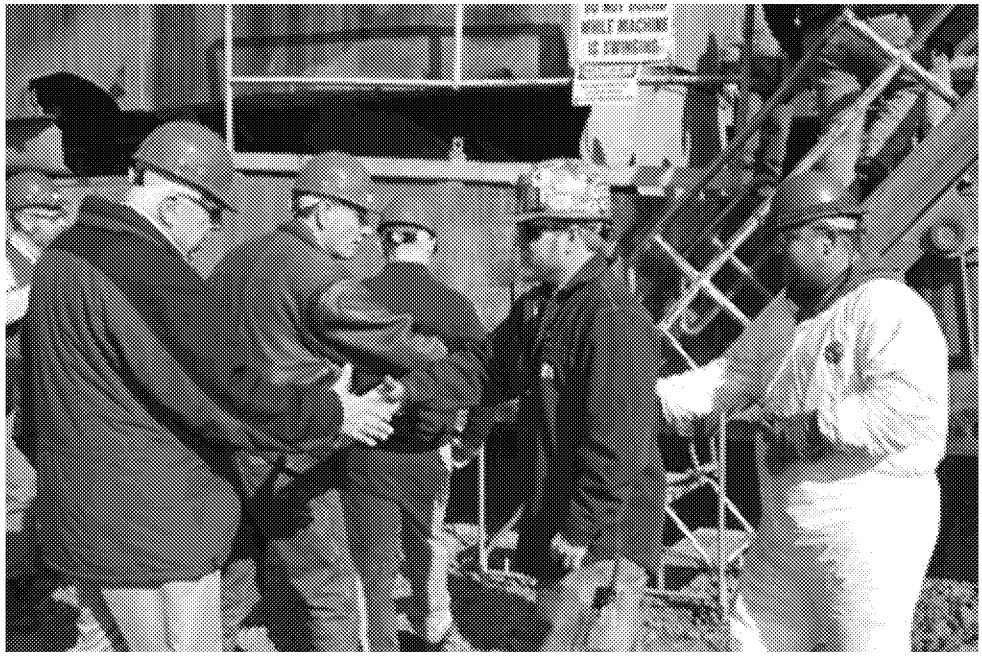
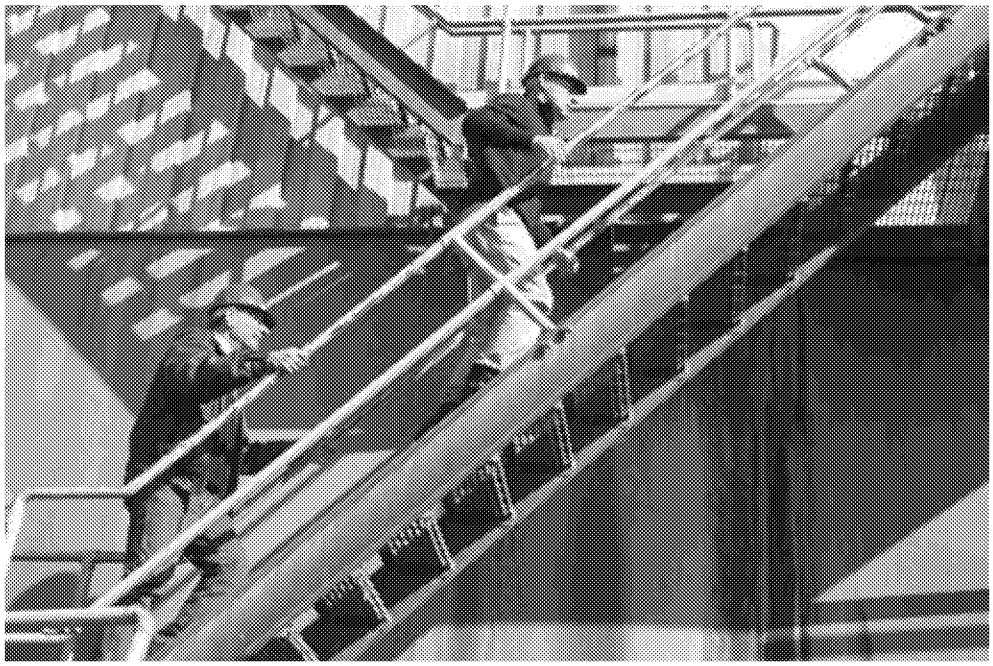
"I appreciate Administrator Pruitt travelling to Wyoming, and my hometown, to see the best coal in the nation," Enzi said. "I am glad we now have an Administration that is willing to work with our nation's energy producers. As the former Mayor of Gillette, I helped these mines get permitted and know firsthand their pristine environmental track record and the benefits they bring to the community."





ArchCoal

Background Information:

Wyoming is the nation's leading producer of coal, accounting for about 40 percent of America's total coal production. In 2016, coal production employed 5,682 workers in Wyoming. More than 80 percent of those workers were located in Campbell County.

On March 27, 2018, the EPA held a listening session in Gillette, WY on the proposed repeal of the Obama administration's so-called Clean Power Plan regulation (CPP). On October 10, 2017, the EPA published a draft rule to repeal the CPP.

On March 22, 2017, Barrasso joined with Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse (D-RI) to introduce the Utilizing Significant Emissions with Innovative Technologies (USE IT) Act. The legislation is cosponsored by Sens. Shelley Moore Capito (R-WV) and Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND). The USE IT Act would support carbon utilization and direct air capture research. The bill would also support federal, state, and non-governmental collaboration in the construction and development of carbon capture, utilization, and sequestration (CCUS) facilities and carbon dioxide (CO2) pipelines.

John – would EPA be putting out the release or would we? In my opinion, just knowing Wyoming press, I think us sending the release might lead to more pickup. I could be wrong, but since our press folks have established relationships with local TV/radio, I think this might pay dividends.

Was just curious.

Mike: Good to talk with your earlier today. As discussed we would like to send a press release following the meeting with the Administrator on Wednesday. We will send it to a press list targeted in your state to try and get some play back home for you and get some outside the beltway pick-up. We will enhance the press release with the following multimedia components:

*Quote from both the Administrator and Member. I'll send you a draft quote if you can also send me a draft of your Member's quote in advance.
*Photograph and b-roll video of the start (first 30 seconds) of the meeting.
*Audio/radio actuality from the Member following the meeting.
*Video clip b-roll of Member's comments following the meeting.
*For these last two points, we would set up in the Member's outer office or hallway (up to you where we set up so we're out of the way) and, standing off camera, ask him two questions to prompt a good response we can clip and use. This entire Q&A won't last more than 60-90 seconds. Questions would be: How did the meeting with the new EPA Administrator go? What does this meeting mean for your constituents back home?
*NOTE: These enhancements greatly increase the likelihood of local pick-up as local TV, radio and print will be able to use these components to easily build a package.

My crew of four will arrive at your office about 5 -10 mins in advance of the Administrator. We will set up in the office for the initial photo and video of the first 30 seconds of the meeting. Then we'll leave the Member's office and go and set up for the brief interview immediately following the meeting.

Please let me know if you have any questions and thank you for helping make this a great meeting that your home state media will be happy to cover!

What They Are Saying…
Broad Support for EPA and NRC Nominees

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Today, the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW) will hold a hearing on the nominations of:

- <!--[if !supportLists]--><![endif]-->Susan Bodine, to serve as assistant administrator for the Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).
- <!--[if !supportLists]--><![endif]-->Kristine Svinicki, to serve as a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) (reappointment);
- <!--[if !supportLists]--><![endif]-->Annie Caputo, to serve as a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission; and
- <!--[if !supportLists]--><![endif]-->David Wright, to serve as a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission;

There is broad support for the different nominees testifying at today's hearing.

Susan Bodine:

"The Environmental Protection Agency needs strong and experienced leadership. That is why I am so pleased that President Trump (intends to) nominate Susan Bodine to serve in this important position. Susan currently serves as my chief counsel at the Environment and Public Works Committee. She has extensive experience working both on Capitol Hill and in leadership at the EPA.

"Susan is committed to finding commonsense ways to protect America's land, air, and water. In this new role, I know that she will work to help communities and small businesses comply with the law, while holding polluters accountable. I look forward to holding a hearing on her nomination." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], chairman of the EPW Committee)

"I have worked with Susan over a number of years as she has had significant leadership positions in environmental law and practice. Susan is dedicated to the rule of law, a lawyer with great integrity, and she understands the critical importance of effective and timely enforcement." (John Cruden, president-elect of the American College of Environmental Lawyers and assistant attorney general, Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice [Dec. 2014 - Jan. 2017])

"I have found Susan to be fair minded, clear thinking, and strategic in her approach, as well as effective in her leadership. She has a deep understanding of EPA and the EPA-state relationship, which will equip her well to lead OECA [Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance]." (Scott Fulton, president of the Environmental Law Institute, general counsel at the EPA [Aug. 2009 - Jan. 2013]).

"In Susan Bodine you have an experienced nominee with a broad background, a keen intellect, a strong regard for public service, a history of treating her professional career colleagues with respect, an abiding commitment to the rule of law and due process, and service within the mainstream traditions of EPA. Her presence as a confirmed nominee will strengthen the voice of enforcement in the agency." (Stanley Meiburg, acting EPA deputy administrator [Oct. 2014 - Jan. 2017]

"I have known Susan for over 20 years. I can think of no better person to lead the enforcement office at EPA. She understands the mission of the agency and the office and how important it is to protecting human health and the environment. A perfect pick." (Marcus Peacock, EPA deputy administrator [Aug. 2005 - Jan. 2009])

"Based on my experience, Ms. Bodine possesses a strong intellect, a keen understanding of environmental law and policy, and is respectful and responsive. She is a seasoned environmental lawyer and a skilled advocate. It is also my view that Ms. Bodine's prior service at EPA is an important – though not indispensable – factor to be considered in her nomination. Her familiarity with the agency and its talented staff would be of service to OECA and Administrator Pruitt, should she be confirmed." (Avi Garbow, EPA general counsel [Aug. 2013 - Jan. 2017] and deputy general counsel, EPA [Sept. 2014 - Aug. 2013])

"Susan epitomizes all the best character and traits we can ask of public servants: tireless and unflappable commitment to the mission of environmental protection and promoting human health, protective of transparency and process in her decision making, objective and apolitical approach to leadership, and empowerment of career decision makers in government." (Roger Martella, EPA general counsel [Aug. 2006 - April 2008)

"[Susan is] an experienced hand in Washington and knows how to get things done. She is very practical and looks for solutions that are going to be workable for everybody." (Granta Nakayama, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance [July 2005 - Jan. 2009])

"[Susan] understands both the internal side of the agency and the proper balance of enforcement." (Mathy Stanislaus, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Land and Emergency Management [June 2009 - Jan. 2017])

"Susan Bodine is extremely qualified to run EPA's enforcement office. As a dedicated public servant with years of experience in environmental policy, she brings a vast understanding of both the agency and the community it regulates. Susan is well-suited to carry out the mission of the administration, and to protect clean air, land and water for the American people." (Marianne Horinko, EPA acting administrator [July 2013 - Nov. 2013], EPA assistant administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response [Oct. 2001- June 2004])

"While I don't envy her challenge, I think bringing Susan back to the agency is an excellent idea. Having a familiar face back at EPA in a senior role is a plus for staff morale. Bringing in someone with her knowledge of the agency and the issues facing it can only be a positive." (Elliot Laws, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response [1993 - 1997])

"She's tough and fair and committed to public service. [Bodine] embodies a compliance-first approach, but also will bring enforcement actions when needed." (Ben Grumbles, secretary, Maryland Department of the Environment [Mar. 2016 - present], EPA assistant administrator, Office of Water [Nov. 2004 - Jan. 2009])

"Susan Bodine brings a commanding intellect and a vast reservoir of experience in environmental policy to the job of running EPA's enforcement office. The agency and the American people will benefit tremendously from her legislative, executive and legal expertise across the spectrum of air, land and water. The administration has made an outstanding selection." (G. Tracy Mehan, III, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Water [Aug. 2001 - Dec. 2003])

"I have known Ms. Bodine for almost 20 years where she served as committee counsel to the House Transportation and Infrastructure and the Senate Environment and Public Works committees, and as assistant administrator for the EPA's Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response. She is a dedicated public servant and is well-qualified to lead EPA's office of Enforcement and Compliance Assistance. Ms. Bodine has proved herself time and again to be fair, competent, professional and well respected by those who have had the pleasure to work with her. As an added benefit, Ms. Bodine knows EPA well and is known and respected by EPA employees." (Cliff Rothenstein, EPA deputy assistant administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response [Apr. 1997 - June 2000])

"Many mayors, as well as my senior staff, have worked with Ms. Susan Bodine over the past 20 plus years. ... Throughout these years, working with Ms. Bodine has been a real pleasure and she has been an asset in every job she has done. She is extremely thoughtful, knowledgeable and professional and has an understanding of the importance of protecting the environment and public health and to do so in an economically responsible way. Her commonsense approach to environmental protection and infrastructure investment is widely respected among her peers and my mayors. While we are sorry to lose her in her current role, she would be a welcome asset at the EPA." (Tom Cochran, CEO and executive director, U.S. Conference of Mayors)

"In her decades of experience in private practice, for Congress and EPA, Susan Bodine has proven her leadership skills and her deep understanding of our nation's environmental laws and how they affect ordinary citizens and small businesses. She has shown leadership in working toward solutions with groups on all sides of the many controversies that entangle environmental protection." (Zippy Duvall, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation)

"Bodine has impeccable credentials with 29 years of environmental law and policy experience garnered from leadership positions in the federal government and private sector." (Craig Unden, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association and David Eliason, president of the Public Lands Council)

Kristine Svinicki:

"I want to congratulate Kristine Svinicki on her (coming) nomination to remain as chair of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission...The Nuclear Regulatory Commission plays an important role in making sure that American nuclear energy is safe and efficient. I look forward to quickly holding a hearing on their nominations." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

"Her [Svinicki's] institutional knowledge and deliberative approach will serve the commission well." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

"I am writing in strong support of the nominations of Annie Caputo and Kristine Svinicki to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission…. We are similarly pleased with Kristine Svinicki's nomination for another term at NRC and her designation as chair. Svinicki's work at the NRC has resulted in improved readiness to regulate small modular and advanced reactors. Under her leadership, the agency has worked to prepare licensing infrastructure for new types of reactors that could provide enormous benefits for climate, American leadership, and domestic job creation." (Josh Freed, Vice President for the Clean Energy Program, Third Way)

Annie Caputo:

"I also want to congratulate Annie Caputo and David Wright on their (upcoming) nominations. I am glad that President Trump (intends to) nominate such qualified leaders for these important positions at the commission. Annie serves as my senior policy advisor for nuclear issues at the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee. Her expertise and experience in nuclear policy makes her very well qualified to serve as a commissioner at the NRC." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

"Caputo's work in the Senate, including her integral role in drafting and moving the Nuclear Energy Innovation and Modernization Act, shows her capability to aid in the NRC's current transition to regulating both existing and advanced nuclear." (Josh Freed, Vice President for the Clean Energy Program, Third Way)

"She [Caputo] has consistently worked with members on both sides of the aisle to promote effective nuclear regulation and is well-respected across partisan lines for her expertise, professionalism, and competence. Few people are more qualified to fill this role at the NRC." (Josh Freed, Vice President for the Clean Energy Program, Third Way)

"It is with great pleasure that we, the Council on Radionuclides and Radiopharmaceuticals, Inc. (CORAR), express our support for the president's nomination of Ms. Annie Caputo to be a commissioner of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission… Ms. Caputo has always been committed to listening and understanding how nuclear policy might impact the radiopharmaceutical industry and patient care. While the manufacture and utilization of radioactive materials in healthcare is not a primary aspect of nuclear energy policy, Ms. Caputo has worked diligently to consider all perspectives and to find solutions to even the most difficult problems." (Roy Brown, chairman of the board of the CORAR)

David Wright:

"I also want to congratulate Annie Caputo and David Wright on their upcoming nominations. I am glad that President Trump (intends to) nominate such qualified leaders for these important positions at the commission… The Nuclear Regulatory Commission plays an important role in making sure that American nuclear energy is safe and efficient. I look forward to quickly holding a hearing on their nominations." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

We agree that the EPA needs to end the Obama-era regulatory rampage, which has hurt people in Wyoming. Now, the EPA is working with Wyoming to find commonsense ways to protect our land, air, and water."

"I appreciated the opportunity to meet with Senator Barrasso today and discuss the issues important to our nation and to the people of Wyoming," said Administrator Pruitt. "The people of Wyoming and their elected officials deserve an EPA that is focused on the basics of protecting the environment, engaging with state and local partners, and ensuring sensible regulations for economic growth."

Elinor,

Thank you, for getting back to me. Unfortunately, because of the budget restraints we are under at the present time, we do not have funds to pay summer interns. However, any intern coming to our office would have an incredible experience working with Pruitt's political staff and the major environmental issues this Administration is dealing with. We would like to see any resumes you are willing to share with us. Thank you, Amy

Hello Amy,

I have been in touch with a few candidates who are still looking for a summer internship, and I would be happy to see if they might be interested. Would it be helpful to send you a few resumes?

Since I know this will be the first question I'm asked, will this be a paid internship?

Sincerely,
Elinor

We will make sure that this will be an educational and interesting experience for her. This is a fascinating time to be at the Agency. Thank you, for all of your help and support and we will start this process earlier next time! Amy Dewey

Hello Amy,

Attached is a resume from another perspective intern. I've never met him, but he applied for our internship and I have talked with him a few times and encouraged him to apply again. I mentioned that you were looking for interns and he said he was interested in applying. To quote him, " Careful stewardship of the environment is very important to me and this seems like a great opportunity for public service." He seems like he could be a good fit too!

Warmly,
Elinor

Barrasso Statement on the Administration's Proposed Withdrawal of the WOTUS Rule

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), released the following statement on the administration's announcement of the proposed withdrawal of the fundamentally flawed Waters of the United States (WOTUS) rule.

"The WOTUS rule would have put backyard ponds, puddles, and prairie pot holes under Washington's control," said Barrasso. "I applaud the Trump administration for working to remove this indefensible regulation. I will continue to work closely with the administration as it seeks commonsense ways to keep America's water clean and safe."

Last month, the EPW committee held an oversight hearing titled "A Review of the Technical, Scientific, and Legal Basis of the WOTUS Rule." At the hearing, Chairman Barrasso called for the withdrawal of the fundamentally flawed rule. Witnesses testified that the WOTUS rule is not supported by:

- Army Corps of Engineers experience and expertise;
- scientific studies; or
- the law.

Background Information

On April 30, 2015, Barrasso, along with Senators Joe Donnelly (D-IN), Jim Inhofe (R-OK), Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND), Pat Roberts (R-KS) and Joe Manchin (D-WV), led a bipartisan group of senators in introducing the Federal Water Quality Protection Act (S. 1140).

Barrasso's bill directed the EPA and Army Corps of Engineers to issue a revised WOTUS rule that protects navigable water from water pollution, while also protecting farmers, ranchers and private landowners.

On Feb. 28, 2017, President Trump signed an executive order to revise the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) and Army Corps of Engineers' WOTUS rule. Barrasso attended the order's signing ceremony at the White House.

On May 3, 2017, the EPA began the regular inter-agency review process by delivering to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) a draft rule to withdraw the WOTUS rule.

Barrasso Statement on the Administration's Proposed Withdrawal of the WOTUS Rule

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), released the following statement on the administration's announcement of the proposed withdrawal of the fundamentally flawed Waters of the United States (WOTUS) rule.

"The WOTUS rule would have put backyard ponds, puddles, and prairie pot holes under Washington's control," said Barrasso. "I applaud the Trump administration for working to remove this indefensible regulation. Heritage undertook an 18-month project to build a roster of conservatives interested in serving in the Trump Administration. The WH has all of the departments. I'm including here just the EPA package.

The Smoke and Mirrors Behind Climate Modeling: Advice to the Incoming Administration

The Trump administration now has the opportunity to fundamentally reform American energy and climate policy. Over the last eight years, the Obama administration consistently pursued carbon taxes and even forcibly pushed many greenhouse gas regulations into federal law. Their justification for doing so were based on a variety of statistical models regarding greenhouse gas emissions, known as integrated assessment models, as well as questionable research regarding the planet's climate. Recent research has found that these models are inherently flawed and, if taken seriously, would have negligible impact on the climate itself and disastrous economic consequences. As a result, we urge the Trump administration and Congress to refrain from using these models for devising regulatory policy.

Please join us for a discussion of the modeling, science, and economics behind climate change.

We'll have an in house lunch afterwards for speakers and people we invite. I booked a room for that so we don't lose it.

David,

Here is a form to fill out.

Everyone in CFMRR meets with Terry near the beginning of each month individually.

One of the things talked about at the meeting is changes made to this form with a rolling forward six month timeframe each meeting.

This week, the first week in May, is the first time that anyone has had one of these monthly meetings with Terry.

I will set your meeting up for next week.

Please email the filled out form to Terry when you finish it, and before the meeting.

I enjoyed meeting and chatting with you yesterday. As I mentioned, I am leaving The Heritage Foundation today and moving to the EPA tomorrow. I don't yet have my contact information for the EPA. If it follows convention, my email address will be kreutzer.david@epa.gov. I will also be checking a personal account, Ex. 6 Personal Privacy (PP)

In any event, if your portfolio includes the economic parts of climate/energy/environment, we should keep in touch.

Take care,

David

A couple of questions have arisen since I emailed you this morning. First, would you mind sending me a list of those that will be attending tomorrow's event? Additionally, when we spoke last week, you had mentioned that there might be one reporter present during the event. If this is the case, would you mind sending their name and affiliation as well?

I appreciate your assistance.

Kelly...I am copying Rob Gordon and Mike Costigan on this email to confirm that you will do a walk through with one of them on Tuesday, Nov 5 around 4 PM at the 227 Pennsylvania Ave SE. We will locate a room separate from the meeting room for the Administrator somewhere in that building and have that information for you no later than the Tuesday walk-through. We will also have a list for you of attendees no later than that Tuesday meeting and as soon as possible. As I indicated, we expect right around 30 with our group. If you have folks who should be around the table, please advise as we are preparing tent cards. We did ask that Henry Darwin who we have been told is the COO attend if possible so we might be able to meet him. Thank you for your assistance on this.

Sure thing. He is copied below.

At this time do you know if the Administrator will be traveling down on Friday night or Saturday morning? Just wanted to be sure I have overnight accommodations lined up.

Do you foresee one advance person accompanying him and one security POC?

AG Sessions just confirmed for Friday's lunch and requested his remarks be open to press. The conference at large, inclusive of Mr. Pruitt's remarks, is set to be closed to press. If you would like the lunch open, just let me know and I can connect Rob Bluey and Greg Scott (our director of media services) with the right person on your team.

Thank you, Becky.

Gordon and Mike – I look forward to meeting you at 4:00pm next Tuesday, December 5th.

I will follow up to let you know if we will have any additional staff members at the table and will be on the lookout for an email with the information on the green room and the list of attendees next week.

In the meantime, have a wonderful weekend!

Kelly…I am copying Rob Gordon and Mike Costigan on this email to confirm that you will do a walk through with one of them on Tuesday, Nov 5 around 4 PM at the 227 Pennsylvania Ave SE. We will locate a room separate from the meeting room for the Administrator somewhere in that building and have that information for you no later than the Tuesday walk-through. We will also have a list for you of attendees no later than that Tuesday meeting and as soon as possible. As I indicated, we expect right around 30 with our group. If you have folks who should be around the table, please advise as we are preparing tent cards. We did ask that Henry Darwin who we have been told is the COO attend if possible so we might be able to meet him. Thank you for your assistance on this.

Hi Madeline,

I neglected to realize that the 20th is the day before recess, so Sen. Lankford will most likely be on a flight back to OK to work the Thursday and Friday in the state. Sorry for that oversight! This is a strange week, as they usually depart on Thursday. Let me take a look at a couple of other lunch and dinner times in Sept/Oct that could be options and I will get back with you.

Sorry this one is so difficult to nail down!

I just wanted to check in here to see if there were any updates on next Wednesday night. Happy to look at other date options as well.

Also, would you by chance know about Mr. Pruitt's letter of recommendation for a Senate Page? We received a note (attached for your reference) that recommends Mr. Chandler Eng. At this time Senator Lankford does not have the privilege of hosting Senate pages. I believe Sen. Inhofe can host pages though.

We are circulating such a letter, and I am happy to discuss our thinking on doing so.

We had understood that we will not be receiving a response to the initial letter before the reporting deadline, and we have unresolved concerns regarding the outreach efforts to our farmers.

I will call shortly.

I was planning on attending the Heritage session so perhaps we could find some space over there to meet at, say 10:30 on the 16th. David Kreutzer may be able to arrange that. I am free nearly all of the 17th and perhaps the two of you can join Kreutzer and me in my offices. Just let me know when so I can reserve that time.

Dear David, Ross would like to come visit you on the morning of Thursday the 16th. He has to be at Heritage by 11:45 for his noon panel, but can meet any time before that. An alternative would be at 2:30 or 3 PM. I don't have Bjorn's schedule, but he has asked to meet with me on Thursday the 16th or Friday the 17th, so I expect he's mostly open. Perhaps you can suggest a time. Kreutzer could join you for the meeting with Ross. No worries if you don't have time. They understand you're busy holding down the fort. Yours, Myron.

Fellow Conservative,

I hope 2018 has started well for you. I enjoyed seeing many partners working to overcome poverty at our 2017 Antipoverty Forum last November. (You can watch that program online here.) I'm looking forward to continued collaboration in 2018 as we work to refocus policy for the good of people.

Please mark your calendars to join us for the 2018 Antipoverty Forum on November 15, 2018, at The Heritage Foundation.

The Antipoverty Forum is a great opportunity for us to come together to leverage our strengths and refine our strategy to bring true change to those who need it most. I hope you'll join us for the 2018 Forum.

This week, President Trump highlighted the importance of welfare reform in his State of the Union address. We have a great opportunity before us to offer real opportunities for families and communities across the country. I look forward to working with you to pursue these important goals in the year ahead.

Dear Kenneth,

Every year I look forward to the Resource Bank Meeting. I'm always inspired by the conversations I have with other leaders and I leave the meeting motivated by the policy victories that are being won across the country, the lessons learned from tough fights, and the connections made across the movement.

Take a look at what other leaders have said about Resource Bank:

- It helped me put our work into broader context. It was truly inspiring and thought-provoking. –Mary Connaughton, Director of Government Transparency and Director of Finance and Administration, Pioneer Institute
- A wonderful event perfectly executed once again. – William Perry Pendley, President, Mountain States Legal Foundation
- This gathering not only allows me to learn from the myriad of speakers and panelists that Heritage Foundation is able to assemble, but also allows me to learn from and share resources with my peers, who like me, are on the front lines of leading their organizations to champion issues of freedom and liberty. –Derek Kreifels, President, State Financial Officers Foundation

See more feedback about Resource Bank here.

I hope you'll join us at Resource Bank this June in Fort Lauderdale to experience this for yourself.

Dear Kenneth,

Will you be able to join us on November 16 at The Heritage Foundation for the 2017 Antipoverty Forum? Every year this event brings together national and state policymakers, researchers, and community practitioners to strategize around reforms that will help more Americans overcome poverty and dependence. It's an important conversation and I hope you'll be part of it.

The updated agenda and event details can be found online at events.heritage.org/antipoverty.

I'm especially delighted to share that three Members of Congress who have been champions of welfare reform will be joining us to speak on current initiatives that impact antipoverty efforts. You'll also hear about the outlook for reform featuring leaders like Paul Winfree, Deputy Director of the White House Domestic Policy Council. See the full agenda here.

I hope to see you there.

Hi there

Senator Carper would like to schedule the meeting for Monday afternoon that he and Mr. Wehrum talked about during their commute this morning. He called Mary Nichols an hour or so ago and asked her if she would be willing to attend and she agreed. I am sure you'll hear from our scheduling team shortly, but I wanted to give you as much notice as possible given the tight timing.

Thanks again for being willing to do this and we look forward to seeing you Monday.

EPA workforce shrinking to Reagan-era levels: agency official

The workforce at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is on course to fall to its lowest level since Ronald Reagan was president, an agency official said on Tuesday.

In June, the EPA unveiled a buyout program that would contribute to the biggest cuts of any federal agency in President Donald Trump's 2018 budget proposal. The EPA employs about 15,000 people.

After buyouts and retirements, that number could drop to 14,428 by October, the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said in an email.

That would be below the fiscal 1988 level, when EPA staffing was 14,440, the official noted. A further 2,998 employees, or just over 20 percent of the total, are eligible to retire now, the official said.

In an April spending bill, the Republican-controlled Congress set a cap for EPA staffing at 15,000 employees for fiscal year 2017, rejecting proposed increases by the previous administration of Democratic President Barack Obama.

EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt said the reductions were "giving long-serving, hard-working employees the opportunity to retire early.

"We're proud to report that we're reducing the size of government, protecting taxpayer dollars and staying true to our core mission of protecting the environment and American jobs," he said in a separate statement.

Pruitt has rolled back a slew of Obama-era regulations limiting carbon dioxide emissions from fossil fuels.

He was also instrumental in convincing Trump to withdraw the United States from the Paris climate accord - a global pact to stem planetary warming through emissions cuts.

While acknowledging the planet is warming, Pruitt has questioned the gravity of the problem and the need for regulations that require companies to take costly measures to reduce their carbon footprint.

Before becoming head of the EPA, he was Oklahoma's attorney general and repeatedly sued the agency he now runs to block federal environmental rules.

Travel audit of EPA chief seen as witch hunt by critics
The Washington Examiner
Paul Bedard
August 30, 2017
http://www.washingtonexaminer.com/travel-audit-of-epa-chief-seen-as-witch-hunt-by-critics/article/2632937

The move by the EPA inspector general's office to audit the costs of agency Administrator Scott Pruitt's flights home -- a fraction of the tax money House and Senate members spend going home on weekends and long recesses -- is coming under fire.

Reacting to the audit announcement, Pruitt's hometown newspaper, the Tulsa World, mocked in an editorial, "Heaven forfend! Scott Pruitt is going home on weekends!"

Allies, meanwhile, have suggested politics are at play since the Environmental Protection Agency's inspector general, Arthur A. Elkins, Jr., is a holdover from the Obama administration and was supported for the job by his senator, Maryland's Ben Cardin, who criticized Pruitt's nomination.

According to a watchdog group, Pruitt spent $12,000 and 43 days over three months traveling to speeches and events often through Tulsa to see his family. His staff has said official business was involved. Other reports put the cost at $15,000.

Environmental groups jumped on the report, with one calling Pruitt a "truant."

The watchdog group, the Environmental Integrity Project, produced a spreadsheet of Pruitt's travel that showed business purposes for all but one trip.

Pruitt does not fly on a government jet. For perspective, lawmakers spent an annual high of $195,000 each flying home, according to the latest government report on personal spending. Pruitt's spending was about 8 percent of that.

Former Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid spent $147,769 flying home to Nevada way back in 2012. The current average bill to taxpayers for each member's trips home is $52,000 a year.

The IG said it was acting on a demand from Congress and a hotline tip. "This assignment is being initiated based on congressional requests and a hotline complaint, all of which expressed concerns about Administrator Pruitt's travel -- primarily his frequent travel to and from his home state of Oklahoma at taxpayer expense," said the announcement.

It said it would begin the audit later this month and raised the possibility of "fraud, waste and abuse."

Conservatives have cheered Pruitt's moves so far to push forward with President Trump's demand to eliminate costly regulations that do little to improve the environment.

But he has faced stiff resistance from inside the agency that under President Obama moved fast to impose regulations on businesses. Democratic lawmakers have also been highly critical of Pruitt, especially over the administration's withdrawal from the Paris climate deal.

The Tulsa World called the audit a "fishing expedition" pushed by anti-Trump media, such as the New York Times, and Washington liberals who sneer at those outside the Beltway.

"As outrages go, it's not worth much," it editorialized. "The Washington press corps and the environmental lobby might prefer that the EPA boss be held captive on the East Coast and that he hear nothing but the opinions of 'green' lobbyists, but the people out in fly-over country like it when we're being heard, too," it added.

What They Are Saying…
Broad Support for EPA and NRC Nominees

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Today, the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW) will hold a hearing on the nominations of:

- Susan Bodine, to serve as assistant administrator for the Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).
- Kristine Svinicki, to serve as a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) (reappointment);
- Annie Caputo, to serve as a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission; and
- David Wright, to serve as a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission;

There is broad support for the different nominees testifying at today's hearing.

Susan Bodine:

"The Environmental Protection Agency needs strong and experienced leadership. That is why I am so pleased that President Trump (intends to) nominate Susan Bodine to serve in this important position.

Susan currently serves as my chief counsel at the Environment and Public Works Committee. She has extensive experience working both on Capitol Hill and in leadership at the EPA.

"Susan is committed to finding commonsense ways to protect America's land, air, and water. In this new role, I know that she will work to help communities and small businesses comply with the law, while holding polluters accountable. I look forward to holding a hearing on her nomination." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], chairman of the EPW Committee)

"I have worked with Susan over a number of years as she has had significant leadership positions in environmental law and practice. Susan is dedicated to the rule of law, a lawyer with great integrity, and she understands the critical importance of effective and timely enforcement." (John Cruden, president-elect of the American College of Environmental Lawyers and assistant attorney general, Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice [Dec. 2014 - Jan. 2017])

"I have found Susan to be fair minded, clear thinking, and strategic in her approach, as well as effective in her leadership. She has a deep understanding of EPA and the EPA-state relationship, which will equip her well to lead OECA [Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance]." (Scott Fulton, president of the Environmental Law Institute, general counsel at the EPA [Aug. 2009 - Jan. 2013]).

"In Susan Bodine you have an experienced nominee with a broad background, a keen intellect, a strong regard for public service, a history of treating her professional career colleagues with respect, an abiding commitment to the rule of law and due process, and service within the mainstream traditions of EPA. Her presence as a confirmed nominee will strengthen the voice of enforcement in the agency." (Stanley Meiburg, acting EPA deputy administrator [Oct. 2014 - Jan. 2017]

"I have known Susan for over 20 years. I can think of no better person to lead the enforcement office at EPA. She understands the mission of the agency and the office and how important it is to protecting human health and the environment. A perfect pick." (Marcus Peacock, EPA deputy administrator [Aug. 2005 - Jan. 2009])

"Based on my experience, Ms. Bodine possesses a strong intellect, a keen understanding of environmental law and policy, and is respectful and responsive. She is a seasoned environmental lawyer and a skilled advocate. It is also my view that Ms. Bodine's prior service at EPA is an important – though not indispensable – factor to be considered in her nomination. Her familiarity with the agency and its talented staff would be of service to OECA and Administrator Pruitt, should she be confirmed." (Avi Garbow, EPA general counsel [Aug. 2013 - Jan. 2017] and deputy general counsel, EPA [Sept. 2014 - Aug. 2013])

"Susan epitomizes all the best character and traits we can ask of public servants: tireless and unflappable commitment to the mission of environmental protection and promoting human health, protective of transparency and process in her decision making, objective and apolitical approach to leadership, and empowerment of career decision makers in government." (Roger Martella, EPA general counsel [Aug. 2006 - April 2008)

"[Susan is] an experienced hand in Washington and knows how to get things done. She is very practical and looks for solutions that are going to be workable for everybody." (Granta Nakayama, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance [July 2005 - Jan. 2009])

"[Susan] understands both the internal side of the agency and the proper balance of enforcement." (Mathy Stanislaus, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Land and Emergency Management [June 2009 - Jan. 2017])

"Susan Bodine is extremely qualified to run EPA's enforcement office. As a dedicated public servant with years of experience in environmental policy, she brings a vast understanding of both the agency and the community it regulates. Susan is well-suited to carry out the mission of the administration, and to protect clean air, land and water for the American people." (Marianne Horinko, EPA acting administrator [July 2013 - Nov. 2013], EPA assistant administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response [Oct. 2001- June 2004])

"While I don't envy her challenge, I think bringing Susan back to the agency is an excellent idea. Having a familiar face back at EPA in a senior role is a plus for staff morale. Bringing in someone with her knowledge of the agency and the issues facing it can only be a positive." (Elliot Laws, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response [1993 - 1997])

"She's tough and fair and committed to public service. [Bodine] embodies a compliance-first approach, but also will bring enforcement actions when needed." (Ben Grumbles, secretary, Maryland Department of the Environment [Mar. 2016 - present], EPA assistant administrator, Office of Water [Nov. 2004 - Jan. 2009])

"Susan Bodine brings a commanding intellect and a vast reservoir of experience in environmental policy to the job of running EPA's enforcement office. The agency and the American people will benefit tremendously from her legislative, executive and legal expertise across the spectrum of air, land and water. The administration has made an outstanding selection." (G. Tracy Mehan, III, EPA assistant administrator, Office of Water [Aug. 2001 - Dec. 2003])

"I have known Ms. Bodine for almost 20 years where she served as committee counsel to the House Transportation and Infrastructure and the Senate Environment and Public Works committees, and as assistant administrator for the EPA's Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response. She is a dedicated public servant and is well-qualified to lead EPA's office of Enforcement and Compliance Assistance. Ms. Bodine has proved herself time and again to be fair, competent, professional and well respected by those who have had the pleasure to work with her. As an added benefit, Ms. Bodine knows EPA well and is known and respected by EPA employees." (Cliff Rothenstein, EPA deputy assistant administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response [Apr. 1997 - June 2000])

"Many mayors, as well as my senior staff, have worked with Ms. Susan Bodine over the past 20 plus years. ... Throughout these years, working with Ms. Bodine has been a real pleasure and she has been an asset in every job she has done. She is extremely thoughtful, knowledgeable and professional and has an understanding of the importance of protecting the environment and public health and to do so in an economically responsible way. Her commonsense approach to environmental protection and infrastructure investment is widely respected among her peers and my mayors. While we are sorry to lose her in her current role, she would be a welcome asset at the EPA." (Tom Cochran, CEO and executive director, U.S. Conference of Mayors)

"In her decades of experience in private practice, for Congress and EPA, Susan Bodine has proven her leadership skills and her deep understanding of our nation's environmental laws and how they affect ordinary citizens and small businesses. She has shown leadership in working toward solutions with groups on all sides of the many controversies that entangle environmental protection." (Zippy Duvall, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation)

"Bodine has impeccable credentials with 29 years of environmental law and policy experience garnered from leadership positions in the federal government and private sector." (Craig Unden, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association and David Eliason, president of the Public Lands Council)

Kristine Svinicki:

"I want to congratulate Kristine Svinicki on her (coming) nomination to remain as chair of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission...The Nuclear Regulatory Commission plays an important role in making sure that American nuclear energy is safe and efficient. I look forward to quickly holding a hearing on their nominations." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

"Her [Svinicki's] institutional knowledge and deliberative approach will serve the commission well." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

"I am writing in strong support of the nominations of Annie Caputo and Kristine Svinicki to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission…. We are similarly pleased with Kristine Svinicki's nomination for another term at NRC and her designation as chair. Svinicki's work at the NRC has resulted in improved readiness to regulate small modular and advanced reactors. Under her leadership, the agency has worked to prepare licensing infrastructure for new types of reactors that could provide enormous benefits for climate, American leadership, and domestic job creation." (Josh Freed, Vice President for the Clean Energy Program, Third Way)

Annie Caputo:

"I also want to congratulate Annie Caputo and David Wright on their (upcoming) nominations. I am glad that President Trump (intends to) nominate such qualified leaders for these important positions at the commission. Annie serves as my senior policy advisor for nuclear issues at the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee. Her expertise and experience in nuclear policy makes her very well qualified to serve as a commissioner at the NRC." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

"Caputo's work in the Senate, including her integral role in drafting and moving the Nuclear Energy Innovation and Modernization Act, shows her capability to aid in the NRC's current transition to regulating both existing and advanced nuclear." (Josh Freed, Vice President for the Clean Energy Program, Third Way)

"She [Caputo] has consistently worked with members on both sides of the aisle to promote effective nuclear regulation and is well-respected across partisan lines for her expertise, professionalism, and competence. Few people are more qualified to fill this role at the NRC." (Josh Freed, Vice President for the Clean Energy Program, Third Way)

"It is with great pleasure that we, the Council on Radionuclides and Radiopharmaceuticals, Inc. (CORAR), express our support for the president's nomination of Ms. Annie Caputo to be a commissioner of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission… Ms. Caputo has always been committed to listening and understanding how nuclear policy might impact the radiopharmaceutical industry and patient care. While the manufacture and utilization of radioactive materials in healthcare is not a primary aspect of nuclear energy policy, Ms. Caputo has worked diligently to consider all perspectives and to find solutions to even the most difficult problems." (Roy Brown, chairman of the board of the CORAR)

David Wright:

"I also want to congratulate Annie Caputo and David Wright on their upcoming nominations. I am glad that President Trump (intends to) nominate such qualified leaders for these important positions at the commission… The Nuclear Regulatory Commission plays an important role in making sure that American nuclear energy is safe and efficient. I look forward to quickly holding a hearing on their nominations." (Sen. John Barrasso [R-WY], Chairman of the EPW Committee)

Hi Liz & Jahan,

I'm working on a story for tomorrow about Senate Democrats' hopes for retaking the majority next year. Several Dems on the EPW committee today told me they're hoping to see much more of Administrator Pruitt next year, and they're hoping to hold hearings on EPA science, climate change and the workforce reductions.

I wanted to give you a heads up and see if you'd like to comment. We'll publish tomorrow morning, so I can get a comment added any time tonight.

Thanks very much,

Obama's EPA appointees spent as much, or more, on travel than Trump's Pruitt, data show
Fox News
March 22, 2018

Former Obama administration EPA directors spent as much or even more on international travel than the agency's current chief, Scott Pruitt, who is facing widespread criticism for wasteful spending.

The Trump appointee to the Environmental Protection Agency has gotten in hot water after revelations that taxpayers had to foot the bill for Pruitt's $120,000 trip to Italy last summer to attend a meeting of G-7 ministers and a private tour of the Vatican.

Nearly $90,000 was spent on food, hotels, commercial airfare and a military jet used by the EPA director and nine other members of the agency's staff. More than $30,000 was spent on providing a security detail during the trip.

Around $40,000 in total was also spent for a four-day trip to Morocco in December, where Pruitt promoted American natural gas exports.

But as the media continue to criticize Pruitt and his "luxury" international travel, his expenses are nothing out of the ordinary – or even lower – compared to previous EPA directors under the Obama administration, who avoided the criticism.

"The double standard couldn't be more clear: Under Barack Obama's EPA the media chose not to report on expenditures to protect the EPA administrator for international travel or the costs of their trips," Jahan Wilcox, an EPA spokesman, told the Washington Free Beacon. "But under the Trump administration the costs to protect our government officials is somehow scandalous."

Lisa Jackson, who was Obama's EPA director between 2009 and 2013, spent more than $332,000 on airfare and security for four international trips, on average $83,000 per trip, according to documents obtained by the Washington Free Beacon.

She spent $64,963 for trips to Tel Aviv; $59,950 to Rio de Janeiro; $51,436 to Montreal; and $155,764 to Beijing, Guangzhou, and Shanghai.

Gina McCarthy, the agency's director between 2013 and 2017, embarked on 10 international trips, spending nearly $630,000 on airfare and security, on average $63,000 per trip.

The documents revealed costs for McCarthy's journeys to Ghana ($68,382), Peru ($45,140), Tokyo ($74,738), Paris ($41,321), Dubai ($90,368), Tokyo ($67,703), Florence ($56,193), Vancouver ($62,247), Vietnam ($68,268), and Beijing ($55,385).

The figures for previous EPA officials also don't reflect the full picture – the cost of providing security for Pruitt is significantly higher as he was subjected to a number of credible threats of violence, including death threats, after he took office.

Authorities determined that the threats were real and the EPA inspector general's office recommended 24/7 security for the director, costing taxpayers roughly $2 million a year, the Wall Street Journal reported.

Anybody Recall The Media Looking At Gina McCarthy's Travel Expenses?

The media has certainly been interested in the travel costs associated with EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt, his staff and security team. Just yesterday the Washington Post ran a breathless article titled, Travel costs for EPA chief's security detail topped $30,000 on Italy trip. There's nothing wrong with the media keeping tabs on expenditures by government officials, of course. We want someone looking out for the taxpayer's dime. Of course, we would expect that the coverage be somewhat fair and balanced.

In the WaPo article, they made the "Italy trip" sound like some sort of sightseeing tour. In reality, Pruitt and his staff were attending the G7 summit, but did visit the Vatican, which the Washington Post found absolutely scandalous. But still, the cost of such things should be made available to the public, right?

Oddly enough, though, it wasn't that long ago that somebody else held the same position as Pruitt. (A couple of somebodys actually.) I don't seem to recall this level of interest, even though Gina McCarthy and Lisa Jackson both did quite a bit of globetrotting on the taxpayer's dime. Let's take a short trip down memory lane and see how the two administrations stack up, shall we?

In 2017, Scott Pruitt and his security detail went on two overseas trips. On the G7 trip, they spent $84,000. On a separate trip to Morocco they spent $40,000. Whether or not that bill for two trips all year is excessive can remain in the eye of the beholder. But before you decide, let's first look at how Gina McCarthy and her security detail did during the Obama administration.

In 2016, Team McCarthy made three trips spending the following amounts:
$68,382 to travel to Ghana
$45,139 to travel to Peru
$74,737 to travel to Tokyo

They were a bit more busy in 2015 it seems. McCarthy and the security team racked up the following bills:
$41,320 to travel to Paris
$90,367 to travel to Dubai
$67,702 to travel to Tokyo
$56,192 to travel to Italy

We need to pause and include a side note about that last entry. When McCarthy went on her own "Italy trip" where do you think she visited? Oh, that's right.. it was the Vatican. Of course she was there to "discuss climate change" so I'm sure everyone's cool with that.

Moving on, Gina McCarthy and her security detail hit the road a bit in 2014 as well.
$62,246 to travel to Vancouver (Seriously? It costs that much to go to Canada?)
$68,267 to travel to Vietnam

McCarthy and company only took one trip in 2013, spending $55,384 to travel to China.

Before McCarthy there was Lisa Jackson who also answered the beckoning call of the road on occasion. Let's see how she and her security detail did.

2012: $64,963 to travel to Israel.
2011: $59,950 to travel to Rio De Janeiro.
2011: $51,435 to travel to Montreal.
2011: $155,763 to travel to China. (No, that wasn't a typo. That was more than $155K for a single trip.)

Scouring the pages of the usual mainstream media outlets, I'm simply failing to find any sort of outraged pieces about how much all those trips cost or asking why there was a need for security details to accompany the EPA chiefs. But ever since Donald Trump came to town it appears to be a subject of keen interest. It almost seems as if there's some deeper, hidden meaning here but I just can't put my finger on it.

Reached for comment on these figures and the apparent disparity in media coverage, the EPA offered this:

The double-standard couldn't be more clear: under Barack Obama's EPA the media chose not to report on expenditures to protect the EPA Administrator for international travel or the costs of their trips, but under the Trump Administration the costs to protect our government officials is somehow scandalous. – EPA spokesman, Jahan Wilcox

Funny old world, isn't it?

Obama EPA Heads Spent Nearly $1 Million On Foreign Trips
Michael Bastasch
The Daily Caller
March 21, 2018
http://dailycaller.com/2018/03/21/obama-epa-heads-foreign-travel-expense/

Two Obama administration Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) chiefs racked up nearly $1 million tab for overseas trips, The Daily Caller News Foundation has learned.

Former EPA Administrators Gina McCarthy and Lisa Jackson spent at least $961,847 on foreign travel over six years, according to figures obtained by TheDCNF. McCarthy's overseas trips cost taxpayers $629,736 and Jackson's cost $332,111.

Recent media coverage has focused on current EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt's travel, including a new Washington Post report that Pruitt's July trip to Italy for the G7 summit cost upwards of $120,000. The Post's story claims Pruitt's trip cost nearly $90,000, "including $36,000 for use of a military jet to catch a flight in New York and a $7,000 premium-class ticket for Pruitt on the transatlantic flight." Adding the $30,000 security detail bumped the cost to around $120,000.

On the other hand, the Washington Examiner reported Pruitt's Italy trip only cost $84,000, including the costs of his security detail. It's not really clear why the two estimates differ.

Virtually no attention has been paid to travel of past EPA administrators. Pruitt's security costs may be higher, which EPA attributes to increased threats against their chief. However, former President Barack Obama's administration also racked up costly foreign travel tabs.

For example, Jackson's 2011 trip to China cost taxpayers $155,763, which includes the cost of her security detail. Jackson left EPA in 2013 amid questions over her use of a secret email account to conduct federal business. Records obtained by TheDCNF show she made at least four foreign trips during her tenure.

McCarthy, who served from 2013 to early 2017, took at least 10 foreign trips while heading EPA. The most expensive for which TheDCNF obtained figures was a 2015 trip to Dubai. McCarthy's trip to Dubai cost taxpayers $90,367, including the cost of her security detail, according to the figures.

For months, reports have focused on Trump administration officials' travel. Former Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price resigned after it came to light he spent $400,000 on non-commercial flights in just a couple of months in 2017.

Reporters and environmental activists have since gone after travel by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Pruitt, seeking to tie them to Price's scandal. Media oversight can shed light on lavish spending, yet reporters have largely ignored Obama administration travel.

TheDCNF previously found that former Obama administration Interior secretaries spent nearly $1 million on non-commercial flights, including chartered jets. It turns out, Zinke had actually spent less than his immediate predecessors on non-commercial flights.

However, Pruitt came under scrutiny for his frequent flying on first class. Pruitt has since said he would fly coach, and EPA officials noted Pruitt flew first class because of security concerns. Pruitt's first-class travel was approved by career officials.

Documents given to the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform by EPA officials show Pruitt spent $105,000 on first class, The Daily Beast reported. Chairman Trey Gowdy requested Pruitt's travel information from EPA in February.

EPA told Gowdy that Pruitt's travel was approved "on an individualized basis," and that his security team "identified specific, ongoing threats associated with the administration administrator's air travel and, therefore, shifted his class based on security protocols that require him to be near the front of the plane."

So far, Pruitt has only taken two foreign trips, the costs of which are in line with past administrators, an EPA spokesman said.

"The double-standard couldn't be more clear: under Barack Obama's EPA the media chose not to report on expenditures to protect the EPA Administrator for international travel or the costs of their trips, but under the Trump Administration the costs to protect our government officials is somehow scandalous," EPA spokesman Jahan Wilcox told TheDCNF.

McCarthy 2016 trips (includes security costs):

- Ghana — $68,382
- Peru — $45,139
- Tokyo — $74,737

McCarthy 2015 trips:

- Paris — $41,320
- Dubai — $90,367
- Tokyo — $67,702
- Italy — $56,192

McCarthy 2014 trips:

- Vancouver — $62,246
- Vietnam — $68,267

McCarthy 2013 trips:

- China — $55,384

Jackson 2012 trips:

- Israel — $64,963

Jackson 2011 trips:

- Rio De Janeiro — $59,950
- Montreal — $51,435
- China — $155,763

Barrasso Statement on the Administration's Proposed Withdrawal of the WOTUS Rule

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), released the following statement on the administration's announcement of the proposed withdrawal of the fundamentally flawed Waters of the United States (WOTUS) rule.

"The WOTUS rule would have put backyard ponds, puddles, and prairie pot holes under Washington's control," said Barrasso. "I applaud the Trump administration for working to remove this indefensible regulation. I will continue to work closely with the administration as it seeks commonsense ways to keep America's water clean and safe."

Last month, the EPW committee held an oversight hearing titled "A Review of the Technical, Scientific, and Legal Basis of the WOTUS Rule." At the hearing, Chairman Barrasso called for the withdrawal of the fundamentally flawed rule. Witnesses testified that the WOTUS rule is not supported by:

- Army Corps of Engineers experience and expertise;
- scientific studies; or
- the law.

Background Information

On April 30, 2015, Barrasso, along with Senators Joe Donnelly (D-IN), Jim Inhofe (R-OK), Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND), Pat Roberts (R-KS) and Joe Manchin (D-WV), led a bipartisan group of senators in introducing the Federal Water Quality Protection Act (S. 1140).

Barrasso's bill directed the EPA and Army Corps of Engineers to issue a revised WOTUS rule that protects navigable water from water pollution, while also protecting farmers, ranchers and private landowners.

On Feb. 28, 2017, President Trump signed an executive order to revise the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) and Army Corps of Engineers' WOTUS rule. Barrasso attended the order's signing ceremony at the White House.

On May 3, 2017, the EPA began the regular inter-agency review process by delivering to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) a draft rule to withdraw the WOTUS rule.

EPA, U.S. Army Move to Rescind 2015 "Waters of the U.S."

WASHINGTON - (June 27, 2017) The Environmental Protection Agency, Department of Army, and Army Corps of Engineers (the agencies) are proposing a rule to rescind the Clean Water Rule and re-codify the regulatory text that existed prior to 2015 defining "waters of the United States" or WOTUS. This action would, when finalized, provide certainty in the interim, pending a second rulemaking in which the agencies will engage in a substantive re-evaluation of the definition of "waters of the United States." The proposed rule would be implemented in accordance with Supreme Court decisions, agency guidance, and longstanding practice.

"We are taking significant action to return power to the states and provide regulatory certainty to our nation's farmers and businesses," said Administrator Scott Pruitt. "This is the first step in the two-step process to redefine 'waters of the U.S.' and we are committed to moving through this re-evaluation to quickly provide regulatory certainty, in a way that is thoughtful, transparent and collaborative with other agencies and the public."

This proposed rule follows the February 28, 2017, Presidential Executive Order on "Restoring the Rule of Law, Federalism, and Economic Growth by Reviewing the 'Waters of the United States' Rule." The February Order states that it is in the national interest to ensure that the Nation's navigable waters are kept free from pollution, while at the same time promoting economic growth, minimizing regulatory uncertainty, and showing due regard for the roles of Congress and the States under the Constitution. To meet these objectives, the agencies intend to follow an expeditious, two-step process that will provide certainty across the country.

The proposed rule would recodify the identical regulatory text that was in place prior to the 2015 Clean Water Rule and that is currently in place as a result of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit's stay of the 2015 rule. Therefore, this action, when final, will not change current practice with respect to how the definition applies.

The agencies have also begun deliberations and outreach on the second step rulemaking involving a re-evaluation and revision of the definition of "waters of the United States" in accordance with the Executive Order.

"The Army, together with the Corps of Engineers, is committed to working closely with and supporting the EPA on these rulemakings. As we go through the rulemaking process, we will continue to make the implementation of the Clean Water Act Section 404 regulatory program as transparent as possible for the regulated public, " said Mr. Douglas Lamont, senior official performing the duties of the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works.

Jahan,

I plan to write this up today. Is there any update since last week?

On Jun 8, 2017, at 2:58 PM, Wilcox, Jahan <wilcox.jahan@epa.gov> wrote:

On background without attribution, wanted to point out that Susan Bodine has been nominated for the assistant administrator for enforcement and compliance assurance at the EPA. In the past few weeks, she has met with numerous senators and the general counselor from Obama's EPA is recommending her confirmation. Her hearing is next Tuesday.

Unfortunately, Senator Carper has said he won't be supporting her because the EPA is not responding to his letters. We would like to point out that at this exact moment, we have received 20 letters from Senator Carper and we responded to 11 of those letters. Of the outstanding 9 letters: 7 have been received in the past 30 days, 1 has been in the past 70 days or less (one of those will be put in the mail tomorrow) and 1 has been in the past 90 days or less.

Some of the letters it just takes a long time to get all of the information together (specifically talking about 2 outstanding letters that are over 30 days) for a response and all of the other 7 letters are under 30 days. It's a little crazy that Carper has decided to oppose nominations to the EPA because of this matter and curious if you would be willing to write about Carper's fake outrage that is giving him and Senate Democrats an avenue to oppose nominations to the EPA.

Additionally, happy to pass along this on-the-record statement from the EPA:

"We've received 20 letters from Senator Carper and 11 have already received a detailed response. Of the remaining 9 letters: 7 were received in the past month and we are working to respond as quickly as possible. EPA staff is committed to being responsive to Congress." – EPA spokesman, Jahan Wilcox

RESEARCH …

EPW Chairman Tom Carper said he would oppose additional EPA nominees until he receives better responses from the EPA from his letters to the agency. "In a statement, Carper said he too met with Bodine on Tuesday, and while her resume is "helpful," the senator said he would oppose advancing additional EPA nominees until the agency provides better responses to the committee's members." (E&E News, 06/08/17)

Scott Fulton who is the President at The Environmental Law Institute and served at the EPA's General Counsel in the Obama Administration says Susan Bodine has a deep understanding of the EPA and recommends her for confirmation. "During the Obama Administration, when I served as EPA's General Counsel, Susan and I worked collaboratively on matters of shared concern to the Administration and the Congress. … Through these various intersections, I have found Susan to be fair minded, clear thinking, and strategic in her approach, as well as effective in her leadership. She has a deep understanding of EPA and the EPA-State relationship, which will equip her well to lead OECA." (The Environmental Law, 06/05/17)

Hi Susan-
I'm writing about your nomination to the position of Assistant Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, Enforcement and Compliance Assurance. I would like know if you have any comment on the following points made in our story:

—that you are a former lobbyist who represented the American Forest and Paper Association from 2011 to 2014 [I was registered for AFPA regarding the nonhazardous secondary materials rulemaking. That was over two years ago and that rulemaking is complete]
—that member companies in the industry group have hundreds of EPA enforcement actions against them, including violations of the Clean Water Act and Clean Air Act. [I did not represent AFPA or their members in any enforcement actions]
—We quote an environmental advocate who describes yours as "a typical revolving door appointment [I have spent over 16 years of my career in public service – working either for Congress or for EPA]
—that member companies in the industry group are named polluters in 34 Superfund sites [I did not represent AFPA or its members in Superfund matters] —that, if confirmed, you will be in a position to decide how extensive some cleanups are — and how much polluters have to spend cleaning them [Remedy selection is under the purview of the Office of Land and Emergency Management]
—that you were a registered lobbyist for Saint-Gobain Containers, a division of Saint-Gobain, whichis one of two companies blamed for contaminating the drinking water in Hoosick Falls, which is a proposed Superfund site [I represented the glass packaging manufacturing subsidiary (Saint Gobain Containers/Verallia – bought out by Ardagh a few years ago) to try to encourage glass recycling. The Hoosick Falls plant was operated by a different company. I never represented the plastics company. I never had any interaction with that company.

Please let us know by tomorrow at 10 AM.

Thank you,
Sharon

EPA Takes Another Step To Advance President Trump's America First Strategy, Proposes Repeal Of "Clean Power Plan"

WASHINGTON (October 10, 2017) - Today, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM), proposing to repeal the so-called "Clean Power Plan (CPP)." After reviewing the CPP, EPA has proposed to determine that the Obama-era regulation exceeds the Agency's statutory authority. Repealing the CPP will also facilitate the development of U.S. energy resources and reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens associated with the development of those resources, in keeping with the principles established in President Trump's Executive Order on Energy Independence.

"The Obama administration pushed the bounds of their authority so far with the CPP that the Supreme Court issued a historic stay of the rule, preventing its devastating effects to be imposed on the American people while the rule is being challenged in court," said EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. "We are committed to righting the wrongs of the Obama administration by cleaning the regulatory slate. Any replacement rule will be done carefully, properly, and with humility, by listening to all those affected by the rule."

CPP Appears to be Inconsistent with the Clean Air Act

The CPP, issued by the Obama administration, was premised on a novel and expansive view of Agency authority that the Trump administration now proposes to determine is inconsistent with the Clean Air Act. In fact, the CPP was put on hold in February 2016, when the U.S. Supreme Court issued an unprecedented, historic stay of the rule.

"EPA will respect the limits of statutory authority. The CPP ignored states' concerns and eroded longstanding and important partnerships that are a necessary part of achieving positive environmental outcomes. We can now assess whether further regulatory action is warranted; and, if so, what is the most appropriate path forward, consistent with the Clean Air Act and principles of cooperative federalism," said Administrator Pruitt.

The CPP was issued pursuant to a novel and expansive view of authority under Section 111 of the Clean Air Act (CAA). The CPP required regulated entities to take actions "outside the fence line." Traditionally, EPA Section 111 rules were based on measures that could be applied to, for, and at a particular facility, also referred to as "inside the fence line" measures. Prior to the CPP being issued, every single Section 111 rule on the books, including a handful of existing source rules and around 100 new-source rules, obeyed this limit. As the CPP departed from this traditional limit on EPA's authority under an "inside the fence line" interpretation, EPA is proposing to repeal it.

EPA has now sent the NPRM to the Federal Register for publication. Upon publication, the public will have 60 days to submit comments.

The repeal package includes:

1. The "preamble," which lays out the proposed legal interpretation, policy implications, and a summary of the cost-benefits analysis of the proposed repeal; and
2. The "Regulatory Impact Analysis (RIA)," an in-depth cost-benefit technical analysis.

CPP Repeal Saves up to $33 Billion in Avoided Costs in 2030

The proposed repeal both examines the Obama administration's cost-benefit analysis, as well as provides insights to support an updated analysis of the environmental, health, and economic effects of the proposed repeal. The Trump administration estimates the proposed repeal could provide up to $33 billion in avoided compliance costs in 2030.

The previous administration's estimates and analysis of these costs and benefits was, in multiple areas, highly uncertain and/or controversial. Specific areas of controversy and/or uncertainty in the Obama administration's analysis of CPP include:

- Domestic versus global climate benefits: The previous administration compared U.S. costs to an estimate of supposed global benefits, and failed to follow well-established economic procedures in estimating those benefits.

- "Co-benefits" from non-greenhouse-gas pollutants: The Obama administration relied heavily on reductions in other pollutants emitted by power plants, essentially hiding the true net cost of the CPP by claiming benefits from reducing pollutants that had nothing to do with the rule's stated purpose.

- Energy cost and savings accounting: The Obama administration counted "energy efficiency" results of their rule as an avoided cost, resulting in a cost estimate being considerably lower than it would have been if they used the appropriate practice of considering these effects as benefits, rather than subtracting them from costs. Had the Obama administration used the Office of Management and Budget's longstanding requirements and accounted cost and savings accordingly, it would have presented a more accurate accounting of the total cost of the CPP.

In this proposed repeal and its accompanying technical documents, this administration is, in a robust, open, and transparent way, presenting a wide range of analysis scenarios to the public.

As part of the notice-and-comment process for this proposed repeal, EPA will continue this analysis and inform the public, as necessary, to get feedback on new modeling and other information. The final action on this proposed repeal will address the results of this ongoing work.

Forthcoming is an Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) that will be reflective of a thoughtful and responsible approach to regulatory action grounded within the authority provided by the statute.

"With this action, the Trump administration is respecting states' role and reinstating transparency into how we protect our environment," said Administrator Pruitt.

Background:
On March 28, President Trump signed an Executive Order on Energy Independence, establishing a national policy in favor of energy independence, economic growth, and the rule of law. The purpose of the Executive Order (EO) is to facilitate the development of U.S. energy resources and to reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens associated with the development of those resources. That same day, EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt signed four Federal Register notices in response to the EO, including a formal announcement of review of the Clean Power Plan. After substantial review, the Agency has proposed to determine that the Clean Power Plan (CPP) must be repealed.

Barrasso Statement on EPA Advisory Committee Directive

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), released the following statement on the directive from Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt to strengthen and improve the independence, diversity and breadth of views on EPA federal advisory committees.

"The Environmental Protection Agency is taking important steps to make sure all of America is included during its policy making process," said Barrasso. "For too long, the agency's advisory committees were not representative of the whole country. Today's directive from Administrator Pruitt will ensure that the unique perspectives of Wyoming and other rural states are not left out of the conversation."

Pruitt's directive will strengthen advisory committee member independence, increase state and local government participation, and enhance geographic diversity. Key advisory committees at EPA include the Science Advisory Board, the Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee, and the Board of Scientific Counselors.

Background Information:

On July 27, 2017, Senator Barrasso sent a letter to Pruitt regarding needed reforms to the Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee (CASAC). In the letter, Barrasso called on Pruitt to "revisit past CASAC practices to make them compliant with the statute." CASAC is supposed to provide independent counsel to the administrator on issues specifically listed in the Clean Air Act related to the federal National Ambient Air Quality Standards (NAAQS).

Barrasso Statement on EPA Energy Independence Report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Today, U.S. Senator John Barrasso (R-WY), chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), released the following statement on the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) report detailing steps the administration plans to take to reduce regulatory burdens on the energy sector. President Trump directed EPA to prepare the report through his March 28, 2017 executive order to promote energy independence and economic growth.

"The Obama administration's overregulation hurt energy workers in Wyoming and across the country," said Barrasso. "Now President Trump is cutting punishing red tape. The Environmental Protection Agency has identified several commonsense steps to roll back Washington's burdensome energy regulations. I will continue to work with the Trump administration as they pursue these important reforms."

This Congress, the EPW committee has held hearings that have highlighted the burdens identified in the report. These include: a full committee hearing on the Waters of the United States rule; a full committee hearing on Carbon Capture Utilization and Sequestration, which identified New Source Review as a key regulatory impediment worthy of further review; and a subcommittee hearing on ozone and National Ambient Air Quality Standards reforms.

Background Information

On March 28, 2017, President Trump signed an executive order promoting energy independence and economic growth.

This executive order rescinded a number of the Obama administration's initiatives. It also directed EPA, the Department of the Interior, and other agencies to review and, if appropriate, suspend, revise, or rescind regulations affecting the oil, natural gas, coal, nuclear, and electric-generation sectors of our economy. Barrasso attended the signing ceremony for the order.

On May 15, 2017, Barrasso sent a letter in support of efforts to review past burdensome regulations issued by the EPA.

On September 27, 2017, Barrasso sent a letter in support of the proposed withdrawal of the WOTUS rule.

Dear Ms. Bowman,

Tea Party Patriots – the nation's largest grassroots tea party organization – will host an activist rally on September 23, 2017, at 12pm in Upper Senate Park, just outside the Capitol.

As part of our activists' trip to Washington, D.C., we would like to organize a White House briefing for them, which Paul Teller arranged for Friday, September 22nd at 2:30. Our activists are eager to help advance President Trump's agenda, and a briefing at the White House to discuss priority issues such as tax reform and repealing ObamaCare would provide our activists with the insights they need to complete their important work across the country.

We would greatly appreciate your help in securing a meeting for our top activists with Administrator Scott Pruitt on Friday, September 22 and/or as a speaker at the rally in Upper Senate Park on Saturday, September 23.

Our supporters have been excited about President Trump's message, and we are organizing this trip to DC, including the rally, to help our activists refine their engagement skills, and to learn more about the policy issues the President is advancing.

Please contact my Executive Assistant, Darcy Crisp, at 404-281-0044 or darcy@teapartypatriots.org so we can work to set up a White House briefing for the nation's top tea party activists.

Thank you for your consideration of this important request. I am grateful for your continued assistance, as Tea Party Patriots works to advance the President's agenda.

In liberty,

Dear Liz and Tate, I'll put you on the Cooler Heads list. Our next meeting is Monday the 4th beginning at 12 noon at CEI, 1310 L Street, N. W., Seventh Floor. Let me know if you or anyone is coming and what you'd like to talk about. Our agenda is usually quite long, but many issues are dealt with quickly and most of the ninety minutes is spent on the top one or two items. This month we will definitely be talking about the Kigali amendments as one of the main agenda items. Ryan, Samantha, Mandy, and Brittany are on the distribution list (and Richard Yamada and John Konkus, I think), and Mandy and Brittany have attended many Cooler Heads meetings over the years and one or two since they joined EPA. Yours, Myron.

The tax bill conference report drops most of the House reforms of the wind, solar, and electric vehicle handouts, but includes opening a small part of section 2002 of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas exploration. Producing oil in ANWR has been an issue since around 1977. When Congress created ANWR in 1980, it delayed deciding on whether to allow drilling in the coastal plain. It's taken forty years, and we aren't done yet. Actual exploration is still some years away. There will be lease sales, litigation at every step, protests, and lots more direct mail fundraising by the 'viros.

However, enactment of the tax bill will be the first step forward—and a huge one—since the Interior Department released their report in 1986 that recommended oil production in the coastal plain. It feels odd that after huge fights and bitter defeats in the mid-nineties and the mid-oughts, opening ANWR is finally being accomplished without much of a scuffle or even public attention. My guess is that the Trump Administration's multi-front assault on the 'viros' entrenched positions is taking its toll. On top of all the progress made at the EPA this year toward undoing the previous administration's climate agenda and the President's decision to get out of the Paris Climate Treaty, ANWR will be an encouraging way for the Congress to close its mostly dysfunctional year. Perhaps now the Senate will even confirm a bunch of nominees before the end of the year.

Hey there, Myron.

Sorry for the delay. So we are confirmed and will be there at noon on Monday. Per your offer, if you could be so kind as to slide us into one of the first slots, it would be much appreciated. It will be myself, Liz, Clint Woods and potentially David Harlow.

Liz and I will open up with a brief 2017 recap (3-5 min max). Liz will distribute the Weekly Standard and National Journal profile pieces on Pruitt that came out in December as handouts. She might have a third as well but TBD. Roughly how many copies of each do you think we will need to bring?

We will then introduce Clint Woods with our Office of Air, whom you know well, and David Harlow, both of who, can speak to NSPS.

We'd love, however, to spend a bulk of the time time fielding questions if that is at all possible. We truly would enjoy the opportunity to interact with folks on broader themes and issues (we might not have the answers to more parochial questions, but can speak to larger themes/ the Admin's top priorities).

Let me know the number of copies of each piece we need to bring and if this plan sounds OK?

The big news this week has been Interior's new offshore plan. Pasted below is what I wrote about it for today's Cooler Heads Digest. It has links to relevant documents and useful stories.

Interior Announces Ambitious New Offshore Oil Plan

Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke on 4th January announced an ambitious oil and gas leasing plan for the federal Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) for 2019 to 2024. The Draft Proposed Plan (DPP) partially replaces the Obama administration's plan for 2017-22.

According to the Department of the Interior's press release, the DPP "proposes to make over 90 percent of the total OCS acreage and more than 98 percent of undiscovered, technically recoverable oil and gas resources in federal offshore areas available to consider for future exploration and development. By comparison, the current program puts 94 percent of the OCS off limits. In addition, the program proposes the largest number of lease sales in U.S. history."

Interior proposes to open 25 of the 26 planning areas and to conduct 47 lease auctions in the five-year period. The DPP, however, is just the first step in a process that will take several years to determine which areas will actually be opened and which lease sales will be held. The process begins with publication of a notice of intent to prepare a draft Environmental Impact Statement. The DPP and the EIS will be open for public comments beginning 8th January, and public meetings will be held around the country beginning 16th January. More information is available here.

Opposition to the plan came immediately from governors from ten coastal states. Florida Governor Rick Scott, a Republican, announced that he would fight to have areas off Florida's coast removed from the plan. Maine Governor Paul LePage, also a Republican, is the only Atlantic or Pacific state governor in favor of oil production off his state's coast.

Offshore oil production would be more popular in these states if the federal government shared royalties with them. Oil and gas royalties from production on federal lands have been shared with states under the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920. Royalties from new production in the Gulf of Mexico have been shared with Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, and Alabama for the past decade. Congress could pass legislation to extend royalty sharing to all coastal states. It seems to me likely that the prospect of tens of billions of dollars of new revenue would eventually change the minds of California's elected officials.

Environmental pressure groups will also oppose the plan and file multiple law suits. They have already raised the argument that leasing new areas for offshore drilling will never happen because of low oil and gas prices. If that is true, then opponents should be able to relax now. But the Trump Administration is planning for the possibility that prices won't remain low forever.

Curiously, the reverse argument was made two decades ago. When President Bill Clinton vetoed legislation to open a small portion of the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) to oil exploration in 1995, one environmental group argued that opening ANWR wouldn't do anything to lower gasoline prices, which were then high, because it would take ten years for the oil to start flowing. My view is that we should expect our elected officials to think more than a few months ahead. That is what the Congress did last month when it included opening ANWR in the tax cuts bill, thereby concluding a forty-year debate, and this is what Secretary Zinke is doing with the new offshore plan.

The geopolitical impacts of the plan were noted by Katharine MacGregor, principal deputy assistant secretary for land and minerals management: "This plan is an early signal to the global marketplace that the United States intends to remain a global leader in responsible offshore energy development and produce affordable American energy for many decades to come." The shale oil and gas revolution has already changed the global energy balance of power in favor of the United States. The mere possibility of similarly vast increases in American offshore production will tip it even further.

Hi Myron-

Thanks for inviting us to come visit the group earlier this week. Below is 1) a list of upcoming comment period deadlines that may be of interest and a link to where you can search for more online 2) a few bullets that may come in handy for STOU-style addresses that your groups might be working on and may wish to include 2017 EPA accomplishments.

Do you mind distributing to the group?

Let me know if we can provide additional information.

EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt and EPA 2017 Accomplishments

- Withdrew from the Job-Killing Paris Climate Agreement: Administrator Pruitt worked with President Trump to withdraw the United States from the Paris Agreement, until the COP agree to fair terms for America.

- Stopped Backdoor Sue & Settle: EPA ended the practice of settling lawsuits with activist groups pushing their agenda behind closed doors. Effectively ending the days of 'regulation through litigation,' EPA will handle pending litigation in an open, transparent process that allows affected stakeholders to participate – and saves taxpayers millions of dollars in attorneys' fees and settlements – effectively taking away a source of taxpayers funding activist agendas. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/administrator-pruitt-issues-directive-end-epa-sue-settle

- Ended the War on Coal and the "Clean Power Plan": Following issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM).
  - EPA proposed to determine that the Obama-era regulation exceeds the Agency's statutory authority.
  - Repealing the CPP will also facilitate the development of U.S. energy resources and reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens associated with the development of those resources.
  - When Obama first took office there were 86,400 coal mining jobs; when he left office there were only 50,00, (a loss of nearly 4,550 a year). As of December 2017, there are now 50,500 jobs, the first net increase in years. (Source U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics)

- Stopped Conflict of Interests for EPA Advisory Committees: Administrator Pruitt has reformed scientific advisory boards to ensure independence, geographic diversity, and integrity in EPA science. No member of EPA's federal advisory committees will be able to receive agency grants to better ensure independence. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/administrator-pruitt-issues-directive-ensure-independence-geographic-diversity
  - According to EPA calculations, in just the last three years, members of three of EPA's 22 FACs – the Science Advisory Board (SAB), Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee (CASAC) and the Board of Scientific Counselors (BOSC) – received upwards of $77 million in direct EPA grant funding while concurrently serving on these committees.

- Restored Cooperative Federalism: Administrator Pruitt has visited nearly 30 states in his first year on the job meeting with stakeholders, governors and other elected officials, to ensure EPA is being responsive to local needs for our diverse country.
  - Since March 1, 2017, EPA has worked with states to approve 206 state air plans/state implementation plans (SIP's). EPA had a backlog of over 700 unapproved SIPs.

- Redefining a 'Water of the U.S.': EPA, Department of Army, and Army Corps of Engineers are moving forward with a two-step process to rescind the 2015 "Waters of the United States" rule and redefine it in a way that provides farmers and land owners the regulatory certainty they need, while also returning power back to states and localities. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/elected-leaders-praise-trump-administrations-move-rescind-wotus

- Properly Implementing TSCA: EPA has cleared a backlog of 700 new chemicals waiting permits for sale. By July, EPA had eliminated the backlog assessing new chemical risk within 90 days – allowing manufacturers to innovate and create jobs. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/epa-eliminates-new-chemical-backlog-announces-improvements-new-chemical-safety-reviews

- Cleaning Up the Superfund Mess: Of the 1,345 sites on EPA's National Priority list, EPA has eliminated in whole or substantial part 7 since March. In 2016, EPA eliminated only 1.
  - EPA is on track to close in whole or in part 27 more in 2018.
  - EPA is on track to issue clean up decisions (RODs) on 14 of over $50 million in clean up this year.

- Draining the Swamp: EPA staff is at the lowest levels since the Reagan presidency, as on boarded employees are now about 14,100.

Action Item

ALEC Action is circulating the joint letter pasted below for signature by other NON-PROFIT GROUPS. The Interior Department's draft offshore oil and gas leasing plan for 2019-24 has elicited widespread opposition from the governors of most coastal states and will elicit similar opposition from many coastal state legislatures. One major reason is that coastal states would not receive a share of federal royalties. States with oil and gas production on federal lands get 50% of the 12.5% federal royalty under the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920 (which is why Wyoming and New Mexico want more drilling on federal lands). Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, and Alabama have received 37.5% of the federal royalty for new offshore production since 2006 (although they have to spend it on coastal restoration). Legislation to share royalties with coastal states would give these states a strong incentive to support offshore production. More information on the offshore plan here.

DRAFT Joint Letter on Offshore Oil Royalty Sharing

Over XX conservative groups support offshore revenue sharing for coastal states

Dear Members of Congress:

On behalf of our organizations and the millions of Americans we represent across all fifty states, we urge you to reform federal government management of offshore energy development revenue, and to share it with the relevant coastal states.

The Department of Interior has proposed dramatically expanding offshore oil and gas drilling on the Outer Continental Shelf. Under the proposal, 98 percent of undiscovered, technically recoverable oil and gas offshore would be available for future development whereas under the existing policy 94 percent of this important energy source is off-limits. This expansion will increase America's energy abundance, create jobs, and generate additional royalty revenue for the federal government.

As the Department of Interior moves to expand offshore drilling, Congress should reform royalty revenue-sharing agreements for all coastal states. Currently, most states only receive revenue from off shore drilling if a federal lease falls within three miles of its coastal border. However, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas receive revenue for select leases beyond three miles under the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act (GOMESA) of 2006.

Revenue-sharing agreements for leases beyond three miles should be expanded to all coastal states. The current policy discourages states from supporting offshore energy development. Those closest to energy development should have a greater say in how the revenue is spent. All states with drilling off their coasts should see part of the revenue, not just the four states covered under GOMESA.

Federal policy for offshore energy development should mirror that of onshore energy development. States containing federal land where drilling occurs receive half of the associated revenue. This arrangement better aligns costs and benefits of energy development, enriching the local communities and generating support for energy development.

Creating revenue sharing agreements for all coastal states would boost support for energy development and help usher in the jobs, economic activity, and royalties that it brings. We urge you to consider reforms that expand revenue sharing agreements for all coastal states.

Sincerely,
American Legislative Exchange Council
ALEC Action

Three items of interest:

1. CEI today released a letter that two of my colleagues, Sam Kazman and Devin Watkins, have sent to the SEC. Here are the first two paragraphs:

It has come to our attention that various municipalities expect substantial future financial harm, but have either explicitly disclaimed the ability to determine such harms or at the least omitted these potential harms when informing bond investors. We wish to notify the SEC of these potential problems so that they can be properly investigated with appropriate action taken to protect investors.

A number of California cities and counties have recently filed lawsuits against several oil and gas companies, claiming that these companies failed to disclose the alleged risks of climate change. However, in these lawsuits the plaintiff cities and counties apparently describe these climate risks in ways that are far different than how they described them in their own bond offerings. In our view, this inconsistency raises serious questions of municipal bond fraud under 15 U.S.C. § 77q(a)(2).

The letter is posted at: https://cei.org/content/sec-investigate-securities-fraud-california-climate-ri.

2. A comment on President Trump's State of the Union. He could have given more than two sentences to the remarkable de-regulatory actions taken in energy and climate policy during his first year. On the other hand, it's also remarkable that he didn't mention global warming, climate change, renewable energy, or alternative energy. The Washington Post did some useful research and discovered that this is the first State of the Union speech in fourteen years in which no form of alternative energy was mentioned. We have come a long way since President George W. Bush told us on 31st January 2006 that, "America is addicted to oil." 3. The New York Times's lead story on Monday was quite astonishing, not because of its unremarkable content, but rather because it was in the New York Times at all. I've pasted the article, which in the print edition appeared at the top of the right column with the headline, Rising Oil Prices Give U. S. an Edge in Global Energy, below. "This is a 180-degree turn for the United States and the impacts are being felt around the world," said Daniel Yergin, the economic historian and author of "The Prize: The Epic Quest for Oil, Money and Power." "This not only contributes to U.S. energy security but also contributes to world energy security by bringing new supplies to the world."

Oil Boom Gives the U.S. a New Edge in Energy and Diplomacy

https://www.nytimes.com/2018/01/28/business/energy-environment/oil-boom.html

HOUSTON — A substantial rise in oil prices in recent months has led to a resurgence in American oil production, enabling the country to challenge the dominance of Saudi Arabia and dampen price pressures at the pump.

The success has come in the face of efforts by Saudi Arabia and its oil allies to undercut the shale drilling spree in the United States. Those strategies backfired and ultimately ended up benefiting the oil industry.

Overcoming three years of slumping prices proved the resiliency of the shale boom. Energy companies and their financial backers were able to weather market turmoil — and the maneuvers of the global oil cartel — by adjusting exploration and extraction techniques.

After a painful shakeout in the industry that included scores of bankruptcies and a significant loss of jobs, a steadier shale-drilling industry is arising, anchored by better-financed companies.

With the price of West Texas intermediate crude above $65 a barrel, a level not seen in almost three years, the United States is becoming a dominant producer. It is able to outflank competitors in supplying growing global markets, particularly China and India, while slashing imports from the Middle East and North Africa.

This year, the United States is expected to surpass Saudi Arabia and to rival Russia as the world's leader, with record output of over 10 million barrels a day, according to the International Energy Agency.

"This is a 180-degree turn for the United States and the impacts are being felt around the world," said Daniel Yergin, the economic historian and author of "The Prize: The Epic Quest for Oil, Money and Power." "This not only contributes to U.S. energy security but also contributes to world energy security by bringing new supplies to the world."

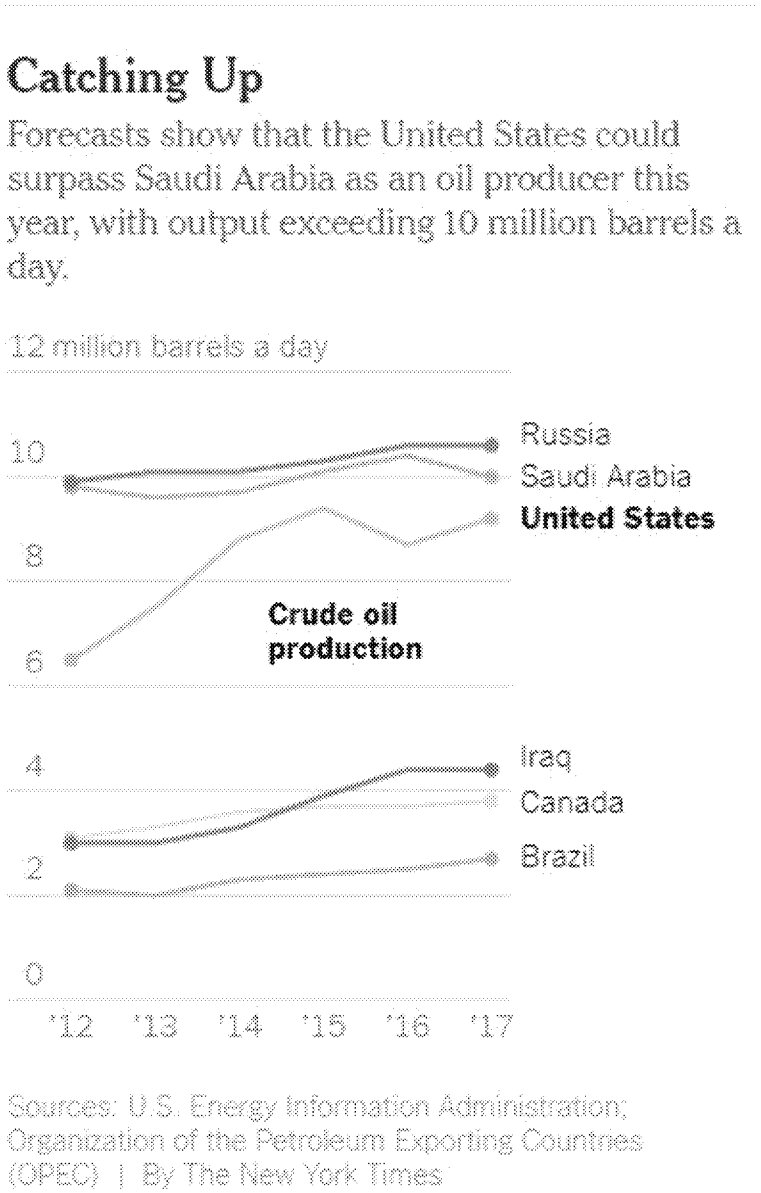
Catching Up

Forecasts show that the United States could surpass Saudi Arabia as an oil producer this year, with output exceeding 10 million barrels a day.



At the same time, the United States is becoming a major exporter of natural gas, another outgrowth of the shale revolution, undercutting Russian energy dominance over Eastern Europe.

The improving energy picture comes as the Trump administration is attempting to increase offshore drilling and loosen other regulations on fossil fuel development. But just as the surge in oil and gas production in shale fields during the Barack Obama administration had little to do with Washington, the current rise is the result of private companies responding to global markets.

Shale fields can be developed relatively quickly and at modest costs relative to the giant projects, whether on land or offshore, that were once favored by big oil companies. That makes it easier to turn investment spigots on or off to adjust to market fluctuations. Companies like Exxon Mobil and Chevron are putting increasing amounts of capital in shale fields, particularly in West Texas and New Mexico.

The results go far beyond the economic, offering Washington strategic weapons once unthinkable. The United States and its allies now have a supply cushion at a time when political turmoil in Venezuela, Libya and Nigeria is threatening to interrupt flows to markets.

Only a few years ago, such threats — along with a recent pipeline failure in the North Sea and storms in the Gulf of Mexico — would have sent the price of crude soaring. Instead, the rise has been muted, and gasoline at the pump remains below $2.60 a gallon across most of the United States.

The new energy power also relieves pressure on Washington to act militarily if tensions between Iran and Saudi Arabia break out into war. And it gives Washington the leeway to apply sanctions on other producers — as it has in Russia, and may in Iran or Venezuela — with far less risk to the global economy.

It is a striking contrast to the 1970s, when Arab oil boycotts forced motorists to line up for blocks to fill their tanks and the economy went into a tailspin. Even more recently, during the presidency of George W. Bush, domestic oil output was declining so rapidly that the country set a course to replace oil with biofuels like ethanol.

Many environmentalists argue that by increasing oil and gas supplies and lowering prices for consumers, shale drilling is extending the life of fossil fuels to the detriment of the environment and the development of cleaner energy.

The shale drilling revolution has remade the global energy market, with imports from members of the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries plunging by 20 percent from late 2016 to late 2017. At the same time, exports rose by hundreds of thousands of barrels a day.

Nothing like the current situation was foreseen in late 2014, when rising domestic production began weighing on global oil prices.

In response, Saudi Arabia led OPEC in a new direction. Instead of throttling back to support prices as the cartel had done so often, it left the market alone and even increased production for a time.

Prices fell below $40 a barrel, as the Saudis and their allies hoped to drive American operations out of business by making shale drilling uneconomical. American exploration quickly dropped, but the price squeeze made companies more innovative in the use of drilling technologies, robotics and sensors to maximize output and reduce costs.

While scores of smaller companies went out of business, the survivors lengthened horizontal wells to yield more oil, and used clever hedging and drilling strategies to maximize profits even when prices slumped.

The response surprised the global oil community. OPEC, Russia and allied producing countries changed course and began cutting back again in 2016.

"OPEC missed the point," said René Ortiz, a former OPEC secretary general and former Ecuadorean energy minister. "They thought they could recover the U.S. market by bringing the prices down. Now the U.S. has gained the leading position in the world oil market regardless of what OPEC does."

"This displacement of Saudi oil, Nigerian oil, Libyan oil and Venezuelan oil," Mr. Ortiz concluded, "was never anticipated."

A week ago, OPEC leaders met in Oman to discuss a probable extension of production cuts into 2019 to support prices. Their biggest obstacle is the United States.

Technological advances unlocking oil from tight rocks like shale has led to a drilling frenzy enabling a doubling of output in a decade, transforming unlikely places like North Dakota and New Mexico into world class petroleum hubs. Pipelines are being built across Texas to serve ports where oil can be pumped onto tankers headed for China, India and other markets.

Domestic production last year averaged 9.3 million barrels a day, and the Energy Department projects that the figure will climb to 10.3 million barrels a day this year, surpassing the record set in 1970. In the meantime, since a 40-year export ban was lifted in 2015, exports of American oil have risen to roughly two million barrels a day — more than many OPEC members.

The department projects an additional increase in domestic production of 500,000 barrels a day in 2019.

Concerns over climate change as well as the growing popularity of electric cars and the eventual aging of the best shale fields will probably curb production and demand over the next few decades. But in the short term, the boom has changed the landscape.

The Energy Department projects that the recent surge will hold the price of Brent crude, the global benchmark, to $60 a barrel in 2018 and $61 a barrel in 2019 — a modest increase from $54 last year. (The Brent price rose above $70 a barrel this month, but few analysts see a return to $100-a-barrel oil.)

The emerging order in the energy realm is a stable balance of power. Saudi Arabia, which essentially runs OPEC, has put a floor under the oil price — probably around $50 a barrel — with its limits on output and exports over the last four years. But now the United States, by the sheer force of its production, the supremacy of its technology, and an unmatched pipeline, refinery and storage structure, has put a ceiling to the price.

Experts note that when oil climbs to $60 a barrel and higher, as it has lately, a drilling rush commences — the national rig count has climbed by over a third in the last year — promising to refill domestic and even global energy inventories. Only a major war or other disruption is likely to send prices soaring.

"We have all suffered these depressed prices over the last two years and we are excited to see the new prices and we will respond accordingly," said Harald Jordan, vice president for engineering at Peak Energy, a Colorado-based producer. "You will see rig activity continue to increase."

Subject: RE: Request for Comment: Pruitt on Global Warming

Dear Liz, There is a voluminous literature on the effects on humankind of warm periods compared to cool periods. However, most climate scientists seldom look at it because it doesn't fit with the claims of impending doom. I have pasted below my short quote to the Hill yesterday, a quote from a book by the archaeologist Brian Fagan, and a few references. It might also be noted that one of the IAMs used to calculate the social cost of carbon shows net benefits for the warming predicted for the next several decades. Of course, these models are highly speculative and don't meet the minimal standards required by the Information Quality Act guidelines. Yours, Myron.

I think Administrator Pruitt's comments show that he is getting up to speed on climate science. His first comment is a question that has been asked by climate realists since the beginning of the debate. The Earth's climate is still emerging from the Little Ice Age, perhaps with the help of human activity. The evidence so far is that humankind is on the whole better off with the slightly warmer temperatures compared to the widespread crop failures and big storms that were prevalent during the Little Ice Age from the fifteenth to the nineteenth centuries. Thus I think Administrator Pruitt is right to say that some more warming may be good. That doesn't mean that every place on the globe will be better off. And it's partly a matter of personal preference. Some people, like my father, prefer cold weather; while I prefer mild, fairly dry weather; others like lots of rain; and so on. As for the endangerment finding, as you know we think it will be necessary to re-open the endangerment finding, which is why CEI petitioned EPA a year ago. It seems to me that Administrator Pruitt's support for a red and blue team analysis of climate science indicates that he is open to being convinced one way or the other on the endangerment finding.

The Little Ice Age
By Brian Fagan
New York: Basic Books, 2000
From Chapter 1: The Medieval Warm Period

For five centuries, Europe basked in warm, settled weather, with only the occasional bitter winters, cool summers and memorable storms, like the cold year of 1258 caused by a distant volcanic eruption that cooled the atmosphere with its fine dust. Summer after summer passed with long, dreamy days, golden sunlight, and bountiful harvests. Compared with what was to follow, these centuries were a climatic golden age. Local food shortages were not unknown, life expectancy in rural communities was short, and the routine of backbreaking labor never ended. Nevertheless, crop failures were sufficiently rare that peasant and lord alike might piously believe that God was smiling upon them.

Nothing prepared them for the catastrophe ahead. As they labored through the warm summers of the thirteenth century, temperatures were already cooling rapidly on the outer frontiers of the medieval world.

I recently saw that EPA head Scott Pruitt said, "We know humans have most flourished during times of what, warming trends."

Can you provide support for this claim?

He also said, "So I think there's assumptions made that because the climate is warming, that that necessarily is a bad thing."

Can you provide any evidence that it's been or will be a good thing?

If you could get back to me as soon as you get a chance, I would greatly appreciate it.

Subject: Cooler Heads Coalition next meeting 5th March and joint letter on offshore oil

The Cooler Heads Coalition will hold its next monthly strategy meeting on Monday, 5th March, beginning at 12 noon at CEI, 1310 L Street, N. W., Seventh Floor. Please e-mail or ring me at 331-2256 with questions or agenda items.

ALEC and 28 other non-profit groups sent a letter this week to Members of Congress on sharing offshore oil royalties with the states, which I have pasted below. Here is a link to a much prettier pdf.

February 12, 2018

Dear Members of Congress:

On behalf of our organizations and the millions of Americans we represent across all fifty states, we urge you to reform federal government management of offshore energy development revenue, and to share it with the relevant coastal states.

The Department of Interior has proposed dramatically expanding offshore oil and gas drilling on the Outer Continental Shelf. Under the proposal, 98 percent of undiscovered, technically recoverable oil and gas offshore would be available for future development whereas under the existing policy 94 percent of this important energy source is off-limits. This expansion will increase America's energy abundance, create jobs, and generate additional royalty revenue for the federal government.

As the Department of Interior moves to expand offshore drilling, Congress should reform royalty revenue-sharing agreements for all coastal states. Currently, most states only receive revenue from off shore drilling if a federal lease falls within three miles of its coastal border. However, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas receive revenue for select leases beyond three miles under the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act (GOMESA) of 2006.

Revenue-sharing agreements for leases beyond three miles should be expanded to all coastal states. The current policy discourages states from supporting offshore energy development. Those closest to energy development should have a greater say in how the revenue is spent. All states with drilling off their coasts should see part of the revenue, not just the four states covered under GOMESA.

Federal policy for offshore energy development should mirror that of onshore energy development. States containing federal land where drilling occurs receive half of the associated revenue. This arrangement better aligns costs and benefits of energy development, enriching the local communities and generating support for energy development.

Creating revenue sharing agreements for all coastal states would boost support for energy development and help usher in the jobs, economic activity, and royalties that it brings. We urge you to consider reforms that expand revenue sharing agreements for all coastal states.

Subject: Cooler Heads Coalition: new supplement to Endangerment Finding Petition

Reminder: the Cooler Heads Coalition will hold its next monthly strategy meeting on Monday, 5th March, beginning at 12 noon at CEI, 1310 L Street, N. W., Seventh Floor. Please e-mail or ring me at 331-2256 with agenda items or questions.

Pasted below is a press release from the Concerned Household Electricity Consumers Council about the latest supplement to their petition to the EPA for reconsideration of the Endangerment Finding. It has lots of useful links.

Electricity Consumers File New Study in Their Call for EPA to Reopen its Endangerment Finding

Key Points:

1. Just Released, new research findings demonstrate that Ten Frequent Climate Alarmists' Claims have each been Rebutted by true experts in each Field by simply citing the most relevant and credible empirical data.

2. The new results invalidate 10 very frequent Alarmist Claims in recent years, and thereby also invalidate the so-called "lines of evidence" on which EPA claimed to base its 2009 CO_2 Endangerment Finding.

3. If the Endangerment Finding is not vacated, whether the current administration likes it or not, it is certain that electric utility, automotive and many other industries will face ongoing EPA CO_2 regulation.

4. This scientifically illiterate basis for regulation will raise U.S. energy prices thereby reducing economic growth, jobs and national security.

February 20, 2018
On February 9, 2018, The Concerned Household Electricity Consumers Council (CHECC) submitted a fifth Supplement to their Petition to provide additional new highly relevant and credible information. (See: EF CPP Fifth Supplement to Petition for Recon FINAL020918) It relates to variables other than temperature describing the Earth's Climate System. With each of EPA's three Lines of Evidence purporting to support their 2009 Endangerment Finding already shown in the CHECC petition and its first 2 Supplements to be invalid, EPA has no proof whatsoever that CO_2 has had a statistically significant impact on global temperatures.

The Council's original Petition (see https://thsresearch.files.wordpress.com/2017/04/ef-epa-petitionforreconsiderationof-ef-final-1.pdf) and First Supplement to Petition (see https://thsresearch.files.wordpress.com/2017/05/ef-checc-suppl-pfr-of-ef-050817-final.pdf) demonstrated that the Endangerment Finding is nothing more than assumptions that have each been disproved by the most relevant empirical evidence from the real world. The original Petition was substantially based on a major peer-reviewed 2016 scientific paper by James Wallace, John Christy and Joseph D'Aleo (Wallace 2016) that analyzed the best available temperature data sets and "failed to find that the steadily rising atmospheric CO_2 concentrations have had a statistically significant impact on any of the 13 critically important tropical and global temperature time series data sets analyzed." The full text of Wallace 2016 may be found at: https://thsresearch.files.wordpress.com/2016/09/ef-cpp-sc-2016-data-ths-paper-ex-sum-090516v2.pdf .

First Supplement to Petition was substantially based on a new April 2017 peer reviewed scientific paper, also from the same authors (Wallace 2017A). Wallace 2017A can be found at: https://thsresearch.files.wordpress.com/2017/04/ef-data-research-report-second-editionfinal041717-1.pdf . Wallace 2017A concluded that once impacts of natural factors such as solar, volcanic and ENSO activity are accounted for, there is no "natural factor adjusted" warming remaining to be attributed to rising atmospheric CO_2 levels.

The Second Supplement to the Petition relied on a third new major peer reviewed scientific paper from James Wallace, Joseph D'Aleo and Craig Idso, published in June 2017 (Wallace 2017B). Wallace 2017B analyzes the GAST data issued by U.S. agencies NASA and NOAA, as well as British group Hadley CRU. (Wallace 2017B can be found at: https://thsresearch.files.wordpress.com/2017/05/ef-gast-data-research-report-062817.pdf) In this research report past changes in the previously reported historical data are quantified. It was found that each new version of GAST has nearly always exhibited a steeper warming linear trend over its entire history. And, this result was nearly always accomplished by each entity systematically removing the previously existing cyclical temperature pattern. This was true for all three entities providing GAST data measurement, NOAA, NASA and Hadley CRU.

The Second Supplement to Petition states: Adjustments that impart an ever-steeper upward trend in the data by removing the natural cyclical temperature patterns present in the data deprive the GAST products from NOAA, NASA and Hadley CRU of the credibility required for policymaking or climate modeling, particularly when they are relied on to drive trillions of dollars in expenditures.

The invalidation of the adjusted GAST data knocked yet another essential pillar out from under the lines of evidence that are the claimed foundation of the Endangerment Finding. As the Second Supplement to Petition stated: It is therefore inescapable that if the official GAST data from NOAA, NASA and Hadley CRU are invalid, then both the "basic physical understanding" of climate and the climate models will also be invalid.

The scientific invalidity of the Endangerment Finding becomes more blindingly obvious and undeniable with each day's accumulation of reliable empirical data -and, the willingness of more scientists to come forward with such new evidence. (See: https://thsresearch.files.wordpress.com/2017/10/pruitt-letter-press-release-1-pm-101617final-4.docx)

Perhaps recognizing this fact, Climate Alarmist have over time gone from focusing on Global Warming, to Climate Change to simply fear of Carbon. Thus, this research sought to determine the credibility of Ten (10) very frequently cited Climate Alarmists Claims.

Below are Rebuttals to each of these ten typical climate alarmists' claims. The rebuttal authors are all recognized experts on their topic and each rebuttal demonstrates the claim fallacy by merely citing the most credible empirical data.

Claim #1: Heat Waves are increasing at an alarming rate and heat kills

For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_AC - Hurricanes

For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_CA - Tornadoes

For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_AC - Droughts and Floods

Claim #5: Global Warming has increased U.S. Wildfires
For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_AC - Wildfires

For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_CA - Snow

For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_CA - Sea Level

Claim #8: Arctic, Antarctic and Greenland ice loss is accelerating due to global warming
For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_AC - Arctic, Antarctic, Greenland 123117

For Rebuttal and Author Credentials See: EF_RRT_CA - Ocean pH

THE CONCLUSION OF THE FIFTH SUPPLEMENT

The invalidation of the three lines of evidence upon which EPA attributes global warming to human GHG emissions breaks the causal link between human GHG emissions and global warming. This in turn necessarily breaks the causal chain between human GHG emissions and the alleged knock-on effects of global warming, such as loss of Arctic ice, increased sea level, and increased heat waves, floods, droughts, hurricanes, tornadoes, etc.

Nevertheless, these alleged downstream effects are constantly cited to whip up alarm and create demands for ever tighter regulation of GHG emissions involving all fossil fuels, not just coal. EPA explicitly relied on predicted increases in such events to justify the Endangerment Finding. But there is no evidence to support such Alarmist Claims, and copious empirical evidence that refutes them. The enormous cost and essentially limitless scope of the government's regulatory authority over GHG emissions cannot lawfully rest upon a collection of scary stories that are conclusively disproven by readily available empirical data.

The scientific invalidity of the Endangerment Finding becomes more blindingly obvious and undeniable with each day's accumulation of reliable empirical data. It is time for an honest and rigorous scientific re-evaluation of the 2009 CO_2 Endangerment Finding. The nation has been taken down a tragically foolish path of pointless GHG/CO_2 regulations and wasteful mal-investments to "solve" a problem which does not actually exist. Our leaders must summon the courage to acknowledge the truth and act accordingly.

The legal criteria for reconsidering the Endangerment Finding are clearly present in this case. The scientific foundation of the Endangerment Finding has been invalidated. The parade of horrible calamities that the Endangerment Finding predicts and that a vast program of regulation seeks to prevent have been comprehensively and conclusively refuted by empirical data. The Petition for Reconsideration should be granted.

The Council brought its Petition because the Obama-era greenhouse gas regulations threaten, as President Obama himself conceded, to make the price of electricity "skyrocket." But clearly CO_2 regulation does not just raise electricity prices, it raises all fossil fuel prices. America can have, and must have, the lowest possible energy costs in order to attain and maintain its energy, economic and national security.

CAFÉ Mid-Term Review

The EPA on Monday announced the results of its mid-term review of the 2021-25 CAFÉ standards. Here is the press release: https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/epa-administrator-pruitt-ghg-emissions-standards-cars-and-light-trucks-should-be. Here is the document: https://www.epa.gov/regulations-emissions-vehicles-and-engines/midterm-evaluation-light-duty-vehicle-greenhouse-gas.

Clearly, this is a big step in the right direction. Pasted below are some resources that might be useful in talking or writing about it.

Here are links to two joint letters on CAFÉ, the first organized by Tom Pyle at the American Energy Alliance and the second by Steve Pociask at the American Consumer Institute:
https://gallery.mailchimp.com/7cbc7dd79831a84c870f9842e/files/ecdabd1d-cdb2-4b6e-a19a-165ba71df113/CAFE_Coalition_letter.pdf
http://www.theamericanconsumer.org/wp-content/uploads/2018/03/ACI-Coalition-Letter-Final.pdf

Here is my colleague Marlo Lewis's op-ed in the San Francisco Chronicle: https://www.sfchronicle.com/opinion/openforum/article/Opinion-Cutting-tailpipe-emission-not-that-12799988.php. Here is CEI's press release: https://cei.org/content/cei-commends-epa-reviewing-cafe-rules.

Here are EPA's talking points:

- In 2012, EPA and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) set greenhouse gas (GHG) and Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) standards for light-duty vehicles starting in Model Year (MY) 2017 - 2025.
- As part of the 2012 rulemaking, EPA made a regulatory commitment to conduct a Midterm Evaluation of the standards for MY 2022-2025 no later than April 1, 2018. This Evaluation would determine whether the standards remain appropriate or should be made more or less stringent.

- In November 2016, the Obama Administration cut short the Midterm Evaluation process and rushed out a Final Determination days before leaving office, on January 12, 2017. Since then, the auto industry and other stakeholders sought a reinstatement of the original Midterm Evaluation timeline, so that the Agency could review the latest information.

- On March 15, 2017, President Trump alongside EPA Administrator Pruitt and U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary Chao announced a reestablishment of the Midterm Evaluation process.

- In August 2017, EPA and NHTSA formally reopened the regulatory docket initiating a 45-day comment period asking for additional information and data relevant to assessing whether the GHG emissions standards remain appropriate, including information on: consumer behavior, feedback on modeling approaches, costs and assessing advanced fuels technologies.

- EPA held a public hearing in Washington, DC, on September 6, 2017. By the end of the comment period, EPA received over 290,000 comments.

- Based on EPA's review and analysis of the comments and information received, and the Agency's own analysis, the Administrator believes that the current GHG emission standards for MY 2022-2025 light-duty vehicles are not appropriate and should be revised.

- Future changes to the standards will ensure that auto-manufacturers can make cars that consumers both want and can afford. They will also treat all advanced vehicle technologies the same, including the potential of natural gas vehicles and the role of high-octane fuels.
- EPA will continue its close partnership with NHTSA to ensure there is adequate consideration of any potential impacts on automobile safety.

Do you mind distributing to the group?

EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt and EPA 2017 Accomplishments

- Withdrew from the Job-Killing Paris Climate Agreement: Administrator Pruitt worked with President Trump to withdraw the United States from the Paris Agreement, until the COP agree to fair terms for America.

- Stopped Backdoor Sue & Settle: EPA ended the practice of settling lawsuits with activist groups pushing their agenda behind closed doors. Effectively ending the days of 'regulation through litigation,' EPA will handle pending litigation in an open, transparent process that allows affected stakeholders to participate – and saves taxpayers millions of dollars in attorneys' fees and settlements – effectively taking away a source of taxpayers funding activist agendas. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/administrator-pruitt-issues-directive-end-epa-sue-settle

- Ended the War on Coal and the "Clean Power Plan": Following issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM).
  - EPA proposed to determine that the Obama-era regulation exceeds the Agency's statutory authority.
  - Repealing the CPP will also facilitate the development of U.S. energy resources and reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens associated with the development of those resources.
  - When Obama first took office there were 86,400 coal mining jobs; when he left office there were only 50,00, (a loss of nearly 4,550 a year). As of December 2017, there are now 50,500 jobs, the first net increase in years. (Source U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics)

- Stopped Conflict of Interests for EPA Advisory Committees: Administrator Pruitt has reformed scientific advisory boards to ensure independence, geographic diversity, and integrity in EPA science. No member of EPA's federal advisory committees will be able to receive agency grants to better ensure independence. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/administrator-pruitt-issues-directive-ensure-independence-geographic-diversity
  - According to EPA calculations, in just the last three years, members of three of EPA's 22 FACs – the Science Advisory Board (SAB), Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee (CASAC) and the Board of Scientific Counselors (BOSC) – received upwards of $77 million in direct EPA grant funding while concurrently serving on these committees.

- Restored Cooperative Federalism: Administrator Pruitt has visited nearly 30 states in his first year on the job meeting with stakeholders, governors and other elected officials, to ensure EPA is being responsive to local needs for our diverse country.
  - Since March 1, 2017, EPA has worked with states to approve 206 state air plans/state implementation plans (SIP's). EPA had a backlog of over 700 unapproved SIPs.

- Redefining a 'Water of the U.S.': EPA, Department of Army, and Army Corps of Engineers are moving forward with a two-step process to rescind the 2015 "Waters of the United States" rule and redefine it in a way that provides farmers and land owners the regulatory certainty they need, while also returning power back to states and localities. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/elected-leaders-praise-trump-administrations-move-rescind-wotus

- Properly Implementing TSCA: EPA has cleared a backlog of 700 new chemicals waiting permits for sale. By July, EPA had eliminated the backlog assessing new chemical risk within 90 days – allowing manufacturers to innovate and create jobs. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/epa-eliminates-new-chemical-backlog-announces-improvements-new-chemical-safety-reviews

- Cleaning Up the Superfund Mess: Of the 1,345 sites on EPA's National Priority list, EPA has eliminated in whole or substantial part 7 since March. In 2016, EPA eliminated only 1.
  - EPA is on track to close in whole or in part 27 more in 2018.
  - EPA is on track to issue clean up decisions (RODs) on 14 of over $50 million in clean up this year.

- Draining the Swamp: EPA staff is at the lowest levels since the Reagan presidency, as on boarded employees are now about 14,100.

- Stopped Backdoor Sue & Settle: EPA ended the practice of settling lawsuits with activist groups pushing their agenda behind closed doors. Effectively ending the days of 'regulation through litigation,' EPA will handle pending litigation in an open, transparent process that allows affected stakeholders to participate – and saves taxpayers millions of dollars in attorneys' fees and settlements – effectively taking away a source of taxpayers funding activist agendas. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/administrator-pruitt-issues-directive-end-epa-sue-settle

- Ended the War on Coal and the "Clean Power Plan": Following issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM).
  - EPA proposed to determine that the Obama-era regulation exceeds the Agency's statutory authority.
  - Repealing the CPP will also facilitate the development of U.S. energy resources and reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens associated with the development of those resources.
  - When Obama first took office there were 86,400 coal mining jobs; when he left office there were only 50,00, (a loss of nearly 4,550 a year). As of December 2017, there are now 50,500 jobs, the first net increase in years. (Source U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics)

- Stopped Conflict of Interests for EPA Advisory Committees: Administrator Pruitt has reformed scientific advisory boards to ensure independence, geographic diversity, and integrity in EPA science. No member of EPA's federal advisory committees will be able to receive agency grants to better ensure independence. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/administrator-pruitt-issues-directive-ensure-independence-geographic-diversity
  - According to EPA calculations, in just the last three years, members of three of EPA's 22 FACs – the Science Advisory Board (SAB), Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee (CASAC) and the Board of Scientific Counselors (BOSC) – received upwards of $77 million in direct EPA grant funding while concurrently serving on these committees.

- Restored Cooperative Federalism: Administrator Pruitt has visited nearly 30 states in his first year on the job meeting with stakeholders, governors and other elected officials, to ensure EPA is being responsive to local needs for our diverse country.
  - Since March 1, 2017, EPA has worked with states to approve 206 state air plans/state implementation plans (SIP's). EPA had a backlog of over 700 unapproved SIPs.

- Redefining a 'Water of the U.S.': EPA, Department of Army, and Army Corps of Engineers are moving forward with a two-step process to rescind the 2015 "Waters of the United States" rule and redefine it in a way that provides farmers and land owners the regulatory certainty they need, while also returning power back to states and localities. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/elected-leaders-praise-trump-administrations-move-rescind-wotus

- Properly Implementing TSCA: EPA has cleared a backlog of 700 new chemicals waiting permits for sale. By July, EPA had eliminated the backlog assessing new chemical risk within 90 days – allowing manufacturers to innovate and create jobs. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/epa-eliminates-new-chemical-backlog-announces-improvements-new-chemical-safety-reviews

- Cleaning Up the Superfund Mess: Of the 1,345 sites on EPA's National Priority list, EPA has eliminated in whole or substantial part 7 since March. In 2016, EPA eliminated only 1.
  - EPA is on track to close in whole or in part 27 more in 2018.
  - EPA is on track to issue clean up decisions (RODs) on 14 of over $50 million in clean up this year.

- Draining the Swamp: EPA staff is at the lowest levels since the Reagan presidency, as on boarded employees are now about 14,100.

Wanted to give you a heads up about the following; should be of interest.

Reducing Regulatory Burdens: EPA withdraws "once-in always-in" policy for major sources under Clean Air Act

WASHINGTON – Today, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) issued a guidance memorandum withdrawing the "once-in always-in" policy for the classification of major sources of hazardous air pollutants under section 112 of the Clean Air Act. With the new guidance, sources of hazardous air pollutants previously classified as "major sources" may be reclassified as "area" sources when the facility limits its potential to emit below major source thresholds.

"This guidance is based on a plain language reading of the statute that is in line with EPA's guidance for other provisions of the Clean Air Act," said Bill Wehrum, assistant administrator of EPA's Office of Air and Radiation. "It will reduce regulatory burden for industries and the states, while continuing to ensure stringent and effective controls on hazardous air pollutants."

Today's memo is another step by which EPA is reducing unnecessary regulatory burdens that deterred innovative efforts to improve the environment. The "once in always in" policy has been a longstanding disincentive for sources to implement voluntary pollution abatement and prevention efforts, or to pursue technological innovations that would reduce hazardous air pollution emissions. States, state organizations and industries have frequently requested rescission of this policy, which was one of the most commonly cited requests in response to President Trump's Executive Order 13777. Today's EPA action is an important step in furtherance of the president's regulatory reform agenda while providing a meaningful incentive for investment in HAP reduction activities and technologies.

The Clean Air Act defines a "major source" as a one that emits, or has the potential to emit, 10 tons per year of any hazardous air pollutant, or 25 tons per year or more of any combination of hazardous air pollutants. Sources with emissions below this threshold are classified as "area sources." Different control standards apply to the source depending on whether or not it is classified as a "major source" or an "area source."

In a 1995 memo, EPA established a "once-in always-in" policy that determined that any facility subject to major source standards would always remain subject to those standards, even if production processes changed or controls were implemented that eliminated or permanently reduced that facility's potential to emit hazardous air pollutants.

Today's memo finds that EPA had no statutory authority under the Clean Air Act to place a time limit on when a facility may be determined to be an area source, and that a plain language reading of the Act must allow facilities to be reclassified as area sources once their potential to emit hazardous air pollutants falls below the levels that define major sources.

EPA anticipates that it will soon publish a Federal Register notice to take comment on adding regulatory text that will reflect EPA's plain language reading of the statute as discussed in this memorandum.

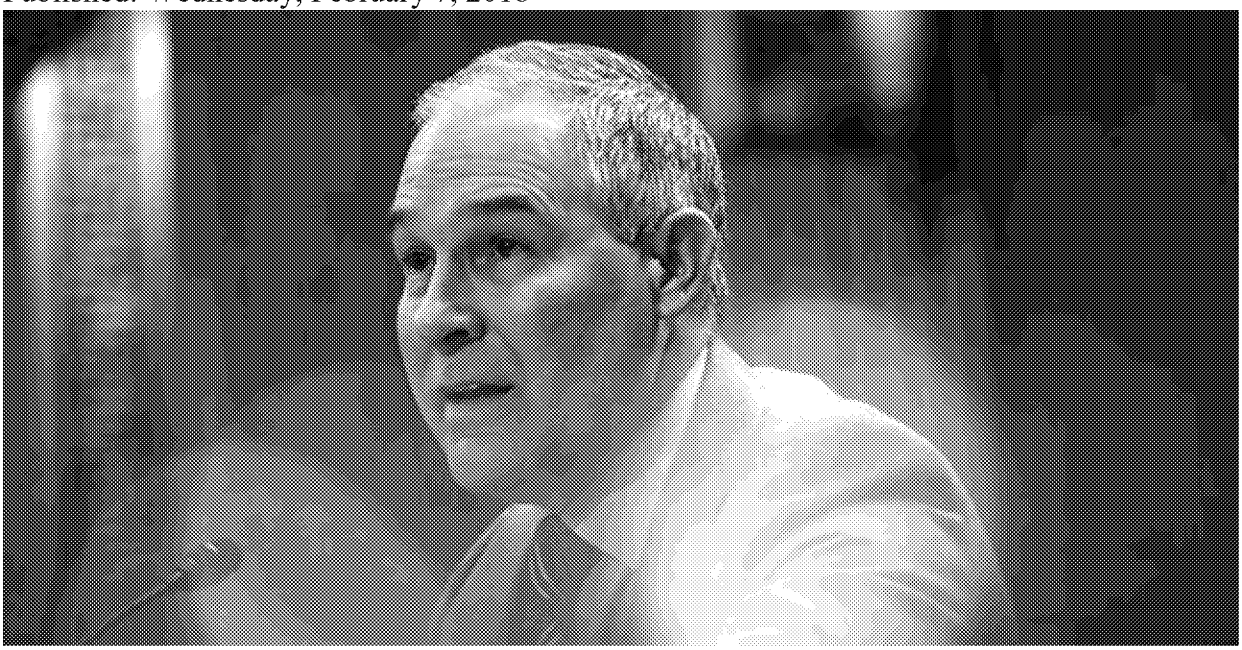
Pruitt suggests warming can help humans

Scott Waldman and Niina Heikkinen, E&E News reporters

Published: Wednesday, February 7, 2018



EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt said yesterday that humans benefit from warmer temperatures. He's pictured in the Senate last week. Pablo Martinez Monsivais/Associated Press

U.S. EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt questioned yesterday if rising global temperatures are harmful to humans, a claim that adds new insight to his alternative views on climate change.

In an interview with KSNV television in Nevada, Pruitt suggested that global warming could be seen as a good thing for people. He said civilizations tend to flourish when it's warm.

"I think there's assumptions made that because the climate is warming, that that necessarily is a bad thing," Pruitt said.

Recently, Pruitt has questioned whether scientists know what the ideal surface temperature should be in the year 2100, or even in 2018. Scientists have disputed that premise, saying that any swift change to global temperatures can have disruptive impacts on plants, animals and humans.

Pruitt's claims yesterday adds new texture to what's known publicly about his skepticism about mainstream climate science. In the past, Pruitt steered away from commenting on what a warming world could mean for humankind. Instead, he often questioned whether humans are having a substantial impact on the climate, while acknowledging that temperatures are climbing. He has also described the science as being politicized and touted the fossil fuel industry's progress in limiting carbon emissions through innovation.

"Is it an existential threat, is it something that is unsustainable, or what kind of effect or harm is this going to have?" he said. "We know that humans have most flourished during times of, what, warming trends?"

A growing body of research has found that humans are warming the Earth at an unprecedented pace, chiefly through the burning of fossil fuels. Possible impacts include a few feet of sea-level rise and an increase in deadly heat waves, potentially making some areas of the planet uninhabitable. The National Climate Assessment released by the Trump administration last year found that it's "extremely likely" that humans are the primary drivers of climate change.

Pruitt is right that temperatures have varied throughout geologic history. But scientists say the speed of change sets the modern age apart. It's happening over a period of decades, not millenia. That makes comparisons to the past inaccurate, they say.

At the beginning of his tenure, Pruitt was criticized for saying humans are not the primary cause of climate change. Since then, he has promoted the idea of a red-team, blue-team climate debate that would highlight areas of uncertainty in the field.

Pruitt's shift in rhetoric has been noticed by even his supporters.

Myron Ebell, who headed Trump's EPA transition team and is director of the Center for Energy and Environment at the Competitive Enterprise Institute, said he noticed that Pruitt was parroting arguments long made by skeptics. One of them is the claim about there being no ideal temperature. Ebell said that's an "aesthetic" preference that depends on whether or not someone prefers cold weather.

"When you're learning about a subject, you pick up pieces, and you don't pick up other pieces right away," Ebell said. "His rhetoric has shifted, and I expect that that is because he has been briefed by someone."

EPA spokesman Jahan Wilcox declined to comment about Pruitt's briefings or if he's been talking with someone about climate science. He pointed to Pruitt's public schedule, which shows recent meetings with a number of conservative think tanks and politicians who question mainstream climate science. That includes Rep. Lamar Smith (R-Texas), chairman of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee, as well as representatives from the Heritage Foundation, Cato Institute and Manhattan Institute.

Some of Pruitt's boosters publicly worried that his new talking points suggest a softening of his climate beliefs. Jay Lehr, the science director at the Heartland Institute, noted in an email that Pruitt's statements send unclear signals about his position.

"Pruitt is certainly confusing us on this issue," said Lehr. "He could be preparing to push the red team-blue team approach, or he could be trying to soften opposition by not being in any way strident in his opposition to climate alarmism."

Lehr described Pruitt as having a tough job and said Heartland is satisfied, "by and large," by the work Pruitt has been doing, "but we are always on edge about any reversal of position."

Pruitt's comments inch closer to those of controversial figures like the former nominee to lead the White House Council on Environmental Quality, Kathleen Hartnett White, who has pointed to carbon dioxide as the "gas that makes life possible on Earth."

She had said that while human activity likely has some influence on climate, CO2 does not have the characteristics of an air pollutant that "contaminates and fouls and has a direct impact on human health." Harnett White hit opposition in the Senate, and her name was withdrawn from consideration for the position over the weekend.

Others who are skeptical of climate science, such as Will Happer, who is rumored to be a contender for science adviser to the president, have pointed to the potential benefits of climate change for crops.

Smith, the science committee chairman, wrote an opinion piece for the Heritage Foundation in which he claimed that rising atmospheric carbon dioxide would benefit plant life.

Previously, Pruitt highlighted the uncertainty inherent in climate change. During his confirmation hearing last year, Pruitt told senators on the Environment and Public Works Committee that humans affect the climate in "some manner" (Climatewire, Jan. 19, 2017).

"The ability to measure with precision the degree and extent of that impact and what to do about it are subject to continuing debate and dialogue, and well it should be," he said.

Later in his tenure, as the Trump administration committed to withdrawing from the Paris Agreement, Pruitt began to note U.S. accomplishments in limiting carbon emissions, even while continuing to raise doubts about the environmental impact of doing so.

Following the release of the draft national climate assessment last August, Pruitt criticized the Obama administration for politicizing carbon emissions (Greenwire, Aug. 11, 2017).

"The past administration used the CO2 issue as a wedge issue," he said. "And that's why we talk about it so much. Why aren't we celebrating what we've achieved with respect to CO2?"

Pasted below are two important articles on polling results. First, Kevin Mooney's critical analysis of the poll by Clear Path Action on attitudes to "clean energy" and to candidates who support "clean energy". Second, the poll by the Institute for Energy Research and the American Conservative Union conducted by MWR Strategies on attitudes to climate change and energy taxes. At the bottom of the IER press release there are links to a slide show and a longer PDF of the questions and results plus sampling data. I encourage you to look at both these links.

'Conservative' clean energy group misleads GOP candidates with skewed survey

by Kevin Mooney | Oct 18, 2017, 6:38 PM

Taxpayers have been footing the bill for government subsidies to pay for wind and solar energy initiatives that cannot stand on their own two feet. (AP Photo/Julie Jacobson)

Would you be more or less likely to vote for a congressional candidate in 2018 if that candidate supported expensive, inefficient, environmentally-hazardous wind farms in your community?

As a Nevada resident in a critical swing state, would you be more or less willing to vote for a congressional candidate who favors the installation of 400-foot-tall wind turbines that will block your view of the skyline, but leave the view from the candidate's private home unobstructed?

Any polling company that included such highly skewed questions in a voter survey could expect to receive responses in line with their policy preferences on energy policy. That polling company could then put out a press release that says candidates who oppose "clean energy" stand to gain politically.

These questions can also be asked from the opposite direction to produce a coerced outcome that says candidates who embrace so-called "clean energy" stand to gain politically in next year's mid-term congressional elections.

That's what an organization known as ClearPath Action, with offices in Washington, D.C., and Charlotte, did earlier this fall when it published the results of a survey that detected a significant swing toward "pro-clean energy GOP candidates," according to the release.

While it may or may not be the case that support for "clean energy" will benefit Republicans politically, the polling results are highly suspect, and if news coverage of the polling were honest, it would say so.

Jay Faison, a North Carolina businessman, founded the ClearPath Foundation and the ClearPath Action Fund in 2015 for the purpose of convincing conservatives and Republicans to embrace clean energy.

"Energy drives everything that we do and for the longest time, the left has owned that debate," ClearPath declares on its website. "It's time for us to take that back. It's time for a conservative clean energy agenda."

In the 2016 election cycle, ClearPath Action allocated more than $3 million to support 15 Republican congressional candidates, according to the Center for Responsive Politics. An investigator for the center estimates that individual donations from the Faison family came out to about $5.3 million.

With the House potentially up for grabs next year, ClearPath appears poised to burrow in where individual races are competitive. If the self-described "conservative clean energy" group can convince even a handful of Republicans in the House and Senate to embrace its agenda, ClearPath could begin to exert real influence. That's clearly the overarching purpose of the poll, which found "more than a 25-point ballot movement statewide in Nevada, Michigan and Arizona" for Republicans who embrace clean energy.

But look at how the questions are framed. Respondents are asked if they are more or less likely to vote for a candidate based on the following:

"A Republican candidate for Congress who supports accelerating the clean energy industry to bring more jobs into their district; stimulating the economy, boosting manufacturing, and expanding middle class job opportunities at home."

"A Republican candidate for Congress who is concerned about the continuing decline of middle class jobs. When thinking about the jobs of the future, they think it's critical to invest in clean energy jobs now so that the next generation will inherit a secure economy."

"A Republican candidate for Congress who believes we should do more to invest in clean energy here in America and reduce our county's dependence on foreign oil from hostile states in the Middle East. Our ability to avoid future wars will depend on our ability to be energy dominant."

And how about some rainbows and sunshine to go with that clean energy? The questions presume that so-called "clean energy" is economically feasible, financially beneficial and environmentally sound. In reality, there is a growing body of evidence with regard to wind and solar that says otherwise.

Moreover, taxpayers have been footing the bill for government subsidies to pay for wind and solar energy initiatives that cannot stand on their own two feet. The Institute for Energy Research, a Washington-based nonprofit group that favors free market solutions for energy policy, has carefully analyzed government figures that show taxpayers have shelled out tens of billions of dollars to support unworkable green energy schemes.

I sent an email to the media contact for ClearPath asking the organization if it would like to defend its survey methodology and explain why its questions failed to acknowledge the economic and environmental problems associated with not-so-clean "clean energy" sources. I received no response.

In Searchlight, Nev., citizen activists and conservation groups successfully joined forces in litigation against the federal government to block an 87-turbine, 200-megawatt wind farm in the hometown of former Sen. Harry Reid. Local residents balked when finalized plans removed turbines from anywhere near Reid's property while placing them in close proximity to their rural neighborhoods. The lesson here is that when the fallout from government-backed green energy schemes is properly understood, average citizens respond.

That's what IER and the American Conservative Union found in their just released nationwide survey.

When asked about their opinion on a proposed tax on carbon dioxide, 44 percent of respondents said they were opposed while 39 percent said they were supportive. But what's even more revealing is that 74 percent of respondents said they would not trust the government to "wisely" spend the money from the tax.

A broad cross section of Americans from "all ideological stripes and all demographic characteristics remain profoundly skeptical of the ability of government to do anything meaningfully and well," IER said in a press release.

That much is evident, but you wouldn't know it from the misleading questions that ClearPath has put into circulation.

What Do People Think About Climate Change?

10/12/2017

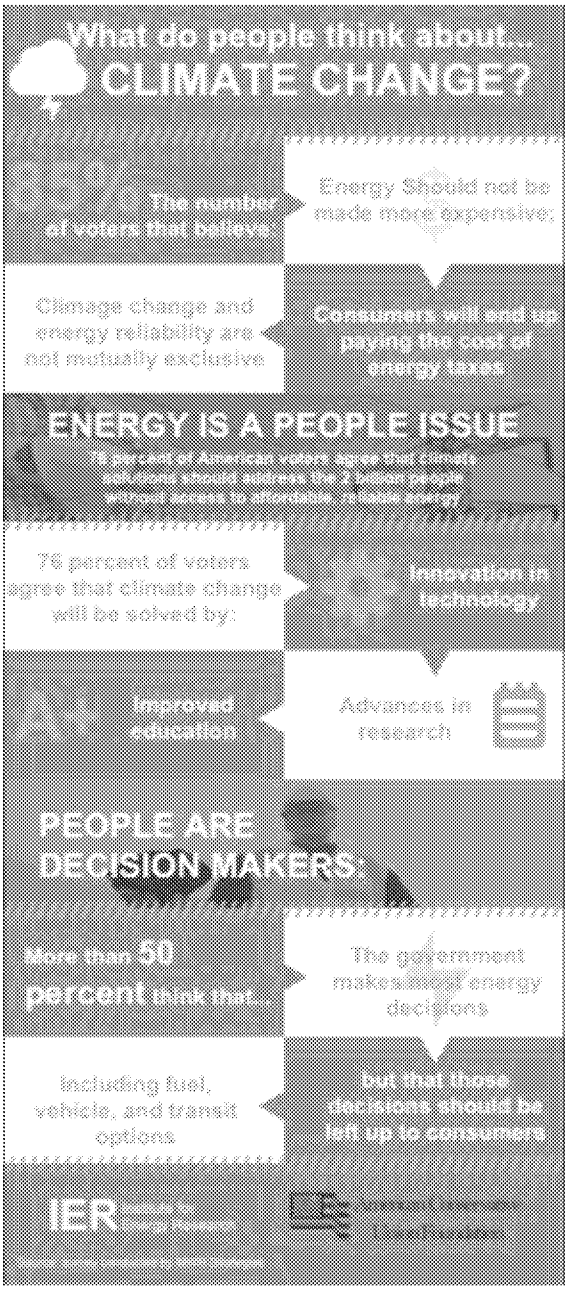
A national research project sponsored by the Institute for Energy Research and the American Conservative Union Foundation consisting of ten focus groups and a nationwide survey (1018 registered voters, margin of error 3.1%) discovered that:

There is little enthusiasm for taxing energy. When asked about a tax on carbon dioxide, 44% of respondents opposed, while 39% favored. More importantly, when asked whether they trusted the federal government to spend the money from such a tax wisely just 18% said they did, while 74% said they did not.

Even among those who ranked climate change as an important risk (identifying it as a 6 or higher on a scale of 1 to 10), just 42% indicated taxing energy was an appropriate response to climate change.

People of all ideological stripes and all demographic characteristics remain profoundly skeptical of the ability of government to do anything meaningfully and well. Consequently, they're unwilling to pay for (or really even consider) anything that looks like a government mandate. Government action is considered a last, worst resort, used only when all other ideas have failed.

Carbon dioxide not considered a pollutant. A solid majority – 55% – said that carbon dioxide is needed for plant life and humans both exhale it and consume it every day. Just 31% said it is damaging the environment.



This (and other results) suggests three things:

First, the obsessive nature of the conversation about carbon dioxide escapes most people. In other words, debates around things like the Paris agreement are more noise than signal.

Second, carbon dioxide and climate change have become decoupled in the minds of many voters. This emphasizes one of the significant findings of this project, namely that climate change has become a catch basket into which all environmental problems have been tossed.

Third, this conversation is far from over. Sentiments about climate change remain as poorly formed and unsettled as they were when this conversation began three decades ago. In other words, in spite of the time and billions of dollars spent, those who press this issue don't seem to be any further along than they were when they started.

"This survey confirms what we have known for a long time. Voters think taxes on energy or its proxy, carbon dioxide, are a bad idea, and they do not trust the government to spend the money from such taxes," said Thomas Pyle, IER President and ACU Foundation Policy Fellow.

"As the tax reform debate unfolds in Washington, lawmakers are forewarned that the voters have no appetite for energy or carbon taxes," said ACU leader Matt Schlapp.

As tax reform legislation takes shape in the next few weeks, our carbon tax event is timely. I have pasted competing lead articles from this morning's E & E Daily and ClimateWire (also published by E & E) below the invitation. Our three panelists all have compelling arguments and data to show how economically destructive, politically destructive, and environmentally useless a carbon tax would be. I hope you can make it.

Promoters of taxes on carbon dioxide emissions are trying to attract support from conservatives by claiming that such taxes are a free market response to global warming. Promoters claim that CO2 taxes can be revenue neutral, can be a huge new source of additional government revenues, and that the revenues can be returned as a dividend to consumers. It is also claimed that taxing emissions is a cost-effective way to lower those emissions, will create more jobs than are lost, and will even provide a boost to the economy.

After opening remarks by Rep. Bill Flores, three experts will debunk these claims and discuss the real economic and political effects of CO2 taxes. Jim Lucier will also discuss a just-published economic analysis of recent carbon tax proposals. There will be time for Q&A with the panelists.

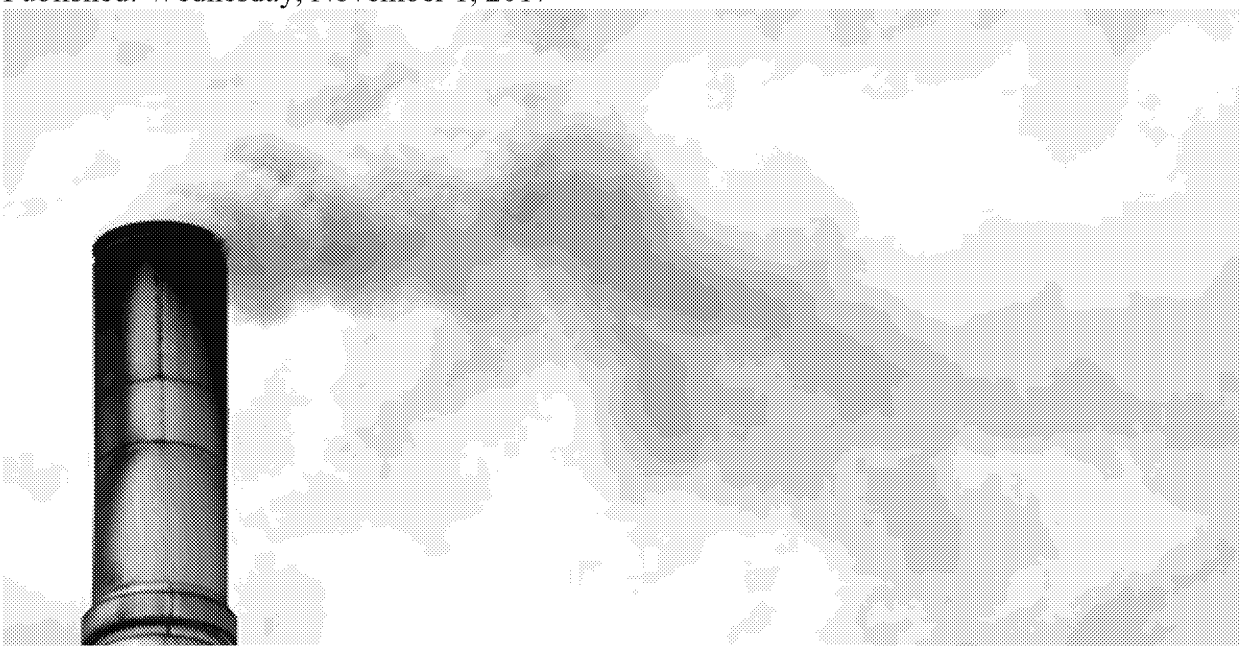
Meet the 'eco right' pushing for a carbon fee

Arianna Skibell, E&E News reporter

Published: Wednesday, November 1, 2017



Despite the political headwinds, some lawmakers continue working toward a carbon tax. Ian Barbour/Flickr

Over the summer, Democratic Sens. Sheldon Whitehouse of Rhode Island and Brian Schatz of Hawaii introduced legislation to instate a carbon tax to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and said they were looking for a Republican co-sponsor.

A glimmer of hope for them emerged when Republican Sen. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina publicly endorsed the plan in September.

But after a spate of hurricanes, a dozen wildfires and mass flooding, many weeks later there has been virtually no public progress on carbon legislation.

"Let's see, let's see, let's see," Whitehouse told E&E News yesterday. "Well, what I can say is what Lindsey Graham has said publicly, which is that he is working with me and looking at that bill. He has announced nothing further, and I have nothing to announce."

Jerry Taylor, a prominent libertarian in favor of a carbon fee, said the lack of movement on the Hill could mean a carbon tax window is opening.

"The main evidence for that read of the law of the land is the opponents of carbon taxation are mobilized and engaged, and they wouldn't be if this were not a live issue," he said. "When you see opponents to a proposed idea mobilized and actively engaged in the fight, it tells you the fight is farther along than you think."

For the last couple of months, grass-roots conservative groups opposed to a carbon fee — the Club for Growth and the Competitive Enterprise Institute, for example — have been on high alert, Taylor said.

Whitehouse said that indeed contrary to popular opinion, there are a growing number of Republicans, conservatives and libertarians who openly support pricing carbon. They're just not on the Hill, yet.

"There is considerable Republican support for a revenue-neutral border adjustable carbon fee outside of the political crucible of Congress, and indeed, it's really the only solution that has generated any significant Republican support," said Whitehouse.

Bob Inglis, a former Republican congressman from South Carolina who famously reversed his climate skeptic stance, agreed there is growing movement on the right to address global warming.

"This space has been dominated by folks on the environmental left," he said. "They think they have an open door to Republicans, but they really don't. So we're developing what we call the 'eco right.' It's a balance to the environmental left."

Think tanks

Niskanen Center

The Niskanen Center was founded in 2014 by Taylor and is predominantly focused on Capitol Hill outreach.

Prior to founding the center, Taylor spent 23 years to advance the Cato Institute's libertarian agenda. His job was to change hearts and minds on issues like free markets, limited government and climate change.

He worked to demonstrate that the economic toll of reducing carbon emissions would not outweigh the potential benefits. But as he spent more time with climate science and economics, his views began to shift (Greenwire, June 16).

Taylor, a vocal proponent of a carbon tax, said he is seeing movement on that front.

"We're meeting not only with the usual suspects, like members of [Florida Republican Rep.] Carlos Curbelo's Climate Solutions Caucus, but also with Republican members outside that coalition, and what we're finding is there is a great deal of sympathy towards action on climate change and a lot of interest in carbon taxation," he said. "But there is uncertainty about the political road from here to there."

Taylor said Republican members are not worried about the merits of the carbon fee structure but rather what is often called "safe passage" politically.

Taylor's preferred legislation would levy carbon taxes at the point of production, use proceeds to offset revenue losses from tax cuts, rebate a portion of the revenue to poor households, eliminate U.S. EPA's authority to regulate greenhouse gas emissions and eliminate green energy subsidies, among other measures.

Taylor said he believes his ideas have merit not only because they allow the market to work but also because climate change is real and imposes risk.

"And it's not conservative to act as if risk does not exist and play dice with the planet," he said.

R Street Institute

In 2012, the Heartland Institute, one of the leading groups questioning global warming science, launched a digital billboard campaign featuring Ted Kaczynski, the "Unabomber."

The ad read, "I still believe in global warming, do you?"

Following the campaign, some Heartland members working on insurance issues decided it was time to break off and start their own outfit that took climate change seriously.

"We still have a friendly relationship with [Heartland]," said Josiah Neeley, senior fellow, energy policy director and Southwest region chief for the R Street Institute. But as insurance brokers, R Street employees understood risk, he said.

"If you're dealing in insurance, you need to be able to take climate change seriously. Because it's not realistic if you're talking about sea-level rise, storms, droughts, floods, you name it," Neeley said.

R Street, founded in June 2012, is a think tank that promotes free markets and limited government. The group supports a carbon tax. Neeley said R Street applies conservative values and principles to address the warming planet.

"The most common or strongest objection that we get from folks when we talk about this stuff is the idea that it's not politically realistic in one way or another," he said.

"Being skeptical about government implementation I think is a fair point," Neeley said, "but there are a lot of things that we advocate for that would be pretty major changes to policy, and knowing politicians are flawed vessels I don't think that means that we should just give up."

Thought leaders

Climate Leadership Council

The Climate Leadership Council, founded earlier this year by Washington, D.C., think tank veteran Ted Halstead, is known around town for its high-profile members, including former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, scientist Stephen Hawking, famed economist Larry Summers and others.

The council also includes corporate entities like Exxon Mobil Corp., BP PLC and Royal Dutch Shell PLC, and nongovernmental organizations like the Nature Conservancy and Conservation International.

In February, the council formally launched with the publication of its manifesto: "The Conservative Case for Carbon Dividends," authored by eight GOP statesmen.

They included Republican heavyweights James Baker III, who served under both Presidents George H.W. Bush and Reagan, and George Shultz, who served under both Reagan and President Nixon.

The proposal, which they presented to the White House, includes four main policy goals: a gradually increasing carbon tax, border carbon adjustments, carbon dividends for all taxpayers and significant regulatory rollbacks (Greenwire, Feb. 8).

Jill Sigal, the executive vice president who served in President George W. Bush's administration as assistant secretary of Energy for congressional and intergovernmental affairs, said the plan is free market, pro-growth, pro-environment and pro-jobs.

"We think that our proposal is a conservative solution to reducing emissions, while not negatively impacting the U.S. economy," she said. "We believe that the U.S. needs to take action on a federal level to reduce climate emissions."

At the Yale Climate Conference this year, Baker said that the proposal should appeal to people regardless of their stance on warming. He called the measure an insurance policy, saying the risk is too great to not do something.

Sigal said she senses climate engagement on a variety of Republican fronts, from the business community to the House Climate Solutions Caucus.

She said council members have frequented the Hill in recent months to take meetings with both House and Senate members about their proposal.

"We've had some interesting and great meetings these last few months," she said. "We're getting very good reception on the Hill."

Alliance for Market Solutions

The Alliance for Market Solutions is led by Alex Flint, a former member of President Trump's transition team who previously worked as senior vice president of governmental affairs at the Nuclear Energy Institute, and by fellow NEI alumnus Chris Carter.

The board of advisers for AMS brings together Republicans with experience in private equity, investment banking and energy consulting.

They include Vicky Bailey, who served as an assistant secretary at the Department of Energy under the second Bush administration and as a Republican member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission; John Rowe, chairman emeritus of Exelon Corp.; and former Sen. Mel Martinez (R-Fla.).

"We think there are a significant number of Republican members of Congress who agree that Republicans need to engage on climate change, and we've been quite pleased with their willingness to talk with us about what a Republican position should be," Flint said.

He stressed his group is "just" Republican. He's not interested in being bipartisan.

The alliance aims to "educate conservative policymakers on the benefits of market-oriented solutions to one of America's most pressing economic challenges: advancing clean energy and reducing carbon pollution," a mission statement said.

Unlike the Climate Leadership Council, AMS is not pushing a dividend model. "Using the proceeds of a carbon tax to pay a rebate or dividend would produce no additional economic growth or jobs," AMS states on its website.

The group advocates using the revenue to cut corporate or individual income taxes, estimating each American family would benefit by nearly $3,000 annually.

Targeting the public

RepublicEn

RepublicEn Executive Director Inglis launched the Energy and Enterprise Initiative at George Mason University in July 2012. The group works to educate conservatives, libertarians and pragmatists about climate change and a carbon fee.

"We're engaging with conservatives in the heartland and presenting broad solutions to climate change. The most immediate solution is a revenue-neutral border adjustable carbon tax," Inglis said.

"Mostly what needs to happen is conservative members of Congress need to hear from their constituents a readiness to engage in the competition of ideas of how to solve climate change," he said. "We're out gathering that constituency so elected officials will feel comfortable leading."

For six years, Inglis said he thought climate change was nonsense. "I didn't know anything about it, but I knew Al Gore was for it," he said.

When he ran for Congress again in 2004, his son approached him. "He said, 'Dad, I'll vote for you, but you're going to clean up your act on the environment,'" Inglis recounted.

Inglis said it was a three-step process, the final of which was an encounter with a scientist named Scott Heron on a trip to look at the Great Barrier Reef.

"We shared a worldview because he was worshiping God in what he was showing me. Told me about conservation changes he's making in his life," Inglis said.

When he returned to Congress, he introduced a revenue-neutral border adjustment tax as an alternative to cap and trade, both of which went nowhere.

"When I got tossed out of Congress, I started working on this effort," Inglis said in reference to RepublicEn. He said his group, made up of over 3,800 members, is finding success with young conservatives and conservatives of faith.

"It's harder with their parents, and it's really pretty hard with their grandparents," he said. "The challenge is the grandparents vote more often. The thing I'm supremely confident of is we are going to win, but will we win soon enough to head off the worst consequences of climate change?"

Citizens' Climate Lobby conservative caucus

CCL targets Republican members of Congress and urges them to join the bipartisan House Climate Solutions Caucus (E&E Daily, Sept. 6).

Since the caucus's inception in 2016, CCL and others have had unprecedented success pushing GOP politicians to join. The grass-roots advocacy organization is angling for the caucus to take up a carbon fee and dividend approach to curb emissions.

While members of the House "Noah's Ark" group, which adds Republicans and Democrats in pairs, have co-sponsored a number of climate-related bills, like renewable energy tax credits, they have yet to broach a carbon tax. Still, activists are encouraged by the growing membership, which reached 60 this year.

Also notable is Citizens for Responsible Energy Solutions, which is a grass-roots campaign engaging with Republican policymakers for cleaner power.

A carbon tax would raise cash, but GOP isn't going there

Josh Kurtz, E&E News reporter

Published: Wednesday, November 1, 2017

As Congress takes on the ambitious and arduous task of rewriting the U.S. tax code, it seems like prime time for advocates of a carbon tax to aggressively promote the idea.

They're not.

Carbon tax advocates — especially those in Republican-aligned groups that have been slowly building their case for a carbon tax — recognize that they've still got a major sales job to do. As they consider the politics of the moment, most carbon tax proponents concede that they'll probably be relegated to the sidelines as the big debate over tax reform commences, although advocates hope it'll enter the debate eventually.

"We are very much in the early stages of our work," said Greg Bertelsen, senior vice president of the Climate Leadership Council, the organization put together by former secretaries of State James Baker and George Shultz, both Republicans, and other former top government officials and business leaders to promote a carbon tax and other remedies to address climate change.

"This is a major policy proposal that Mr. Baker and Mr. Shultz and others have proposed," Bertelsen said. "Like any major proposal, it's going to take time to build support and educate policymakers."

There is zero evidence that Republican congressional leaders, who will be driving the debate over tax reform in tandem with the Trump administration and are anxious for their first major legislative victory of the year, have any interest in addressing a carbon tax proposal right now.

"I wouldn't see too many Republicans jumping on this," said Steve Valk, a spokesman for the Citizens' Climate Lobby, a group that has worked to push climate issues to the forefront in Congress.

GOP leaders need near-unanimity in their caucuses to get any tax reform proposal through and are seeking to avoid complications and distractions.

"You have to pick your battles," said Valk, whose organization has helped bring about the creation of the 60-member House Climate Solutions Caucus, which is equally divided between Republicans and Democrats. "The Republicans really want to pass a tax bill, and to do so, they have to all be on the same page."

But talk of a carbon tax may not be completely absent from the tax reform debate. Although House leaders are optimistically aiming to pass their version of the bill before Thanksgiving, the overall legislative process could take considerably longer, and there may be opportunities to inject the climate tax proposal into the broader discussion.

Rep. John Larson (D-Conn.), a senior member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee and the lone Democrat on Ways and Means who also belongs to the Climate Solutions Caucus, told E&E News last week that he plans to introduce a "Pollution Tax Amendment" when the panel takes up the GOP reform bill in the next few weeks (Climatewire, Oct. 24). While by Larson's own admission the amendment is unlikely to get very far, it could make some Ways and Means Republicans uncomfortable — and it may also open the door to some discussion about the concept.

"If there's an opportunity to share our proposal with lawmakers — members of the committee or otherwise — we'll take it," Bertelsen said.

But Valk said he doesn't expect the idea to get much traction in Ways and Means unless Rep. Carlos Curbelo (R-Fla.), a member of the panel and co-chairman of the Climate Solutions Caucus, embraces it.

Curbelo's office did not respond to a request for comment this week. Neither did spokesmen for two other Ways and Means Republicans who are members of the climate caucus, Reps. Dave Reichert of Washington and Patrick Meehan of Pennsylvania. The caucus itself has not advanced any proposals to address climate change in its short life span.

Valk said Curbelo seems likely to back the Republican tax plan and isn't expected to try to attach a carbon tax amendment to it.

"I think he's going to keep his powder dry for legislation down the road," Valk predicted. "I think his plan is to be a good team player" during the tax reform debate.

Even if a Democratic proposal on the carbon tax doesn't get far in committee initially, former Rep. Bob Inglis (R-S.C.), executive director of republicEn, a group offering free-enterprise solutions to tackle climate change, sees additional opportunities for introducing the issue during the reform debate.

The House Republican tax plan, he said, features so many tax cuts that would dramatically expand the federal deficit that lawmakers may be looking for solutions to plug the budget hole. A revenue-neutral carbon tax will be one option for tax-writers to consider.

"Adding a carbon tax is a way to do tax reform and balance the budget at the same time," Inglis said yesterday. "The idea is to tax pollution, not profits. It's completely consistent with what conservatives have long advocated."

The key, the former lawmaker said, will be to persuade Republicans concerned about exploding the deficit to break with President Trump and GOP congressional leaders.

"Whether this is going to happen, I don't know," he said. "It depends on whether budget hawks balk at a revenue-negative proposal. If they do, then you have to search for revenue."

Democrats are already warning about the consequences of growing the federal deficit.

In the Democrats' weekly address released Saturday, which amounted to a "pre-buttal" of the GOP reform plan, Sen. Ben Cardin (D-Md.), a member of the tax-writing Finance Committee, said Republicans have "formulated a tax scheme that they admit will add $1.5 trillion to our deficit while putting Medicare and Medicaid at risk.

And their plan hurts middle- and low-income working families while providing huge tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans."

Democratic criticism is unlikely to sway Republicans committed to cutting taxes. But an analysis by the nonpartisan Concord Coalition, which has long fought to reduce government deficits, could carry a little more political pop.

"Faced with the prospect of steep tax cuts, a number of Republicans in the House and Senate seem to have forgotten their frequently voiced concerns about deficits," Steve Winn wrote this week. "It is important to remember — as many economists across the political spectrum have noted in recent days — that tax cuts, while they can provide some short-term boost for the economy, do not 'pay for themselves.'"

Right now, there is little chatter about any senator attempting to attach a carbon tax amendment to the tax package when it hits the Finance Committee. Senate aides said the priority of Democratic leaders now is to home in on the message that the Republican plan hurts middle-class families, and Democratic lawmakers may be reluctant to advance any proposal that can be construed as a tax increase in the context of the broader reform debate.

As if to buttress the point, the Senate Democratic Policy and Communications Committee has scheduled a hearing for this afternoon titled "Who Pays for the GOP's Trillion Dollar Tax Cut? How Families, Seniors and the Middle Class Are Hit Hardest." The session will feature testimony from national policy experts and stakeholders in Kansas, where a massive tax cut in 2012 crippled government services and stifled economic growth, in the Democrats' view.

Still, the broad tax debate could ultimately open up discussions about energy taxes and incentives and their overarching policy implications (E&E Daily, Oct. 27). And stand-alone Democratic bills promoting a carbon tax have been introduced in the House and Senate, though with no action scheduled so far.

"We're making progress," Inglis said.

I know some people will find this scientific study incredible, but it turns out that in past eras cold weather has led to crop failures and hence to famines and epidemics. If cold weather can do that, think what even more terrible things warm weather might cause.

Interestingly, the study suggests that long periods of cold, dry weather were the primary facilitators of epidemics in the past. The records suggest that cold periods in ancient and pre-modern China were associated with an increase in the frequency of droughts, as well as attacks of locusts.

Cold climate tied to famine, locust swarms in ancient China

Chelsea Harvey, E&E News reporter

Published: Tuesday, November 7, 2017

Flooding in China has historically contributed to epidemics, and climate change could make that even worse. Paul Gonzalez/Flickr

Scientists are worried about the effects of long-term warming on human health and infectious disease, but a new study finds a link between epidemics and a cold climate.

By analyzing Chinese records throughout nearly 2,000 years of history — from between A.D. 1 and 1911 — researchers have found that climate-driven disturbances like floods, droughts and locust outbreaks were associated with disease epidemics. The findings, published yesterday in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, particularly suggest that climate-related agricultural failures may have led to famines and declines in human health and nutrition, which made communities more susceptible to infection.

Interestingly, the study suggests that long periods of cold, dry weather were the primary facilitators of epidemics in the past. The records suggest that cold periods in ancient and pre-modern China were associated with an increase in the frequency of droughts, as well as attacks of locusts.

As a result, the scientists write, "climate cooling could have resulted in collapsed agricultural production and reduced health conditions due to famine, thereby increasing the prevalence of human epidemic events."

The new research underscores the idea that climatic changes may affect human health in a variety of ways. Present-day concerns about climate change and infection often focus on the potential of higher temperatures to facilitate the spread of disease vectors, like mosquitoes. Indeed, scientists are already finding links between climate change and vector-borne diseases like malaria or dengue fever. But the new research suggests that climate-driven failures in agriculture may have had equally significant effects on human health and susceptibility to disease in the past.

It's also not the first time ancient climate cooling events have been linked to an increase in infectious disease. Some studies — such as one examining years during the Renaissance, published in PNAS in 2011, and another covering a period in the Middle Ages, published in Nature Geoscience last year — have suggested that periods of cooling in Europe have also been associated with both social upheaval and disease outbreaks.

These studies may seem to contradict other research suggesting that hotter, wetter climate shifts contribute to increases in disease outbreaks. But the authors of the new paper point out that the links between climate conditions and disease transmission patterns may depend heavily on the time scale in question. Indeed, while long periods of cooling were associated with epidemics via agricultural failure, the researchers note that on smaller time scales, temporary spikes in temperature may have helped disease-carrying insects and other vectors to flourish — perhaps through increases in precipitation and flooding, as well as heat — causing temporary spikes in disease outbreaks.

"Future studies should pay more attention to the scale-dependent effects of temperature on human epidemic events," the researchers suggest.

Indeed, the effects of long-term warming on infectious disease among humans still remain in question, given that we only have a few centuries of human-driven climate change to examine so far. But scientists are growing ever more concerned about the effects of global warming on disease transmission.

Recent studies have suggested, for instance, that rising temperatures may help mosquitoes in the Northern Hemisphere expand their ranges into areas that were previously too cold for them. Similarly, increases in severe storms and flooding events may provide the damp conditions necessary for disease-carrying insects to breed or bacteria to proliferate.

And many scientists today have also warned that future climate change may pose a significant risk to agriculture in some parts of the world, through warming temperatures and increases in the frequency or intensity of floods, droughts, wildfires and other natural disasters.

It remains to be seen how these effects will play out over very long time scales, of the sort examined in this week's study. Yet the new study suggests that certain types of disturbances — droughts, floods and famines in particular — seem to contribute to disease transmission, regardless of the time scale or whether they were caused by warming or cooling trends. And if scientists expect an increase in these events over long periods in the future — which many studies suggest will be the case — concerns about future infectious disease may only grow more intense.

New CEI Paper Asks: Where is the Scientific Debate in the Climate Debate?

A Veneer of Certainty Stoking Climate Alarm by Rupert Darwall

The national discussion on climate change has escalated under the Trump administration, which makes it crucial to ensure that actual debate is happening regarding the science used to create policy and inform public opinion. A new paper from the Competitive Enterprise Institute, released today, highlights how open debate is key to improving the state of scientific knowledge and achieving sound policy outcomes.

"Open debate in science is crucial," says report author Rupert Darwall. "Climate change policy advocates habitually make claims about the strength of the science that go far beyond what is warranted by the state of current scientific knowledge on the climate system. We need more debate in order to arrive at the best science possible. The red team/blue team approach is a good model to follow."

Taking a lesson from the 2014 American Physical Society (APS) climate workshop, Darwall's paper suggests taking EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt's proposal for red/blue team assessment as a means to encourage healthy scientific debate. Open debate was on display at the APS workshop, which took place in Brooklyn and lasted just over seven hours. A unique event in the annals of the climate debate, it featured three climate scientists who support the climate change consensus and three climate scientists who do not. That format required an unusual degree of honesty about the limitations of the current understanding of the climate system. For the most part, circumspection, qualification, and candid admissions of lack of knowledge were the order of the day.

"Open debate is as crucial in science as it is in a democracy. Things are different when climate scientists are on the stand alongside their peers who know the science as well as they do, but disagree with the conclusions they draw from the same body of knowledge," explains Darwall. "The biggest winner from a red/blue team assessment will be the public. If people are to buy into policies that will drastically alter their way of life, they should be fully informed of the consequences and justifications."

Instead of debating, highlighting and, where possible, resolving disagreement, many mainstream climate scientists work in a symbiotic relationship with environmental activists and the news media to stoke fear about allegedly catastrophic climate change, providing a scientific imprimatur for an aggressive policy response while declining to air private doubts and the systematic uncertainties.

President Trump is scheduled to announce his decision to cancel the Paris Climate Treaty at 3 PM today. I don't have any idea which route to withdrawal he will take.

The environmental pressure groups, the international establishment, many corporate CEOs, the Democrats, and the Swamp in general are going to attack him in the media with everything they've got. I hope that everyone who can will support and praise the pullout in every public media channel you use. Note that the President's Twitter handle is @realDonaldTrump.

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT TRUMP

Rose Garden

3:32 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. (Applause.) Thank you. I would like to begin by addressing the terrorist attack in Manila. We're closely monitoring the situation, and I will continue to give updates if anything happens during this period of time. But it is really very sad as to what's going on throughout the world with terror. Our thoughts and our prayers are with all of those affected.

Before we discuss the Paris Accord, I'd like to begin with an update on our tremendous -- absolutely tremendous -- economic progress since Election Day on November 8th. The economy is starting to come back, and very, very rapidly. We've added $3.3 trillion in stock market value to our economy, and more than a million private sector jobs.

I have just returned from a trip overseas where we concluded nearly $350 billion of military and economic development for the United States, creating hundreds of thousands of jobs. It was a very, very successful trip, believe me. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you.

In my meetings at the G7, we have taken historic steps to demand fair and reciprocal trade that gives Americans a level playing field against other nations. We're also working very hard for peace in the Middle East, and perhaps even peace between the Israelis and the Palestinians. Our attacks on terrorism are greatly stepped up -- and you see that, you see it all over -- from the previous administration, including getting many other countries to make major contributions to the fight against terror. Big, big contributions are being made by countries that weren't doing so much in the form of contribution.

One by one, we are keeping the promises I made to the American people during my campaign for President -- whether it's cutting job-killing regulations; appointing and confirming a tremendous Supreme Court justice; putting in place tough new ethics rules; achieving a record reduction in illegal immigration on our southern border; or bringing jobs, plants, and factories back into the United States at numbers which no one until this point thought even possible. And believe me, we've just begun. The fruits of our labor will be seen very shortly even more so.

On these issues and so many more, we're following through on our commitments. And I don't want anything to get in our way. I am fighting every day for the great people of this country. Therefore, in order to fulfill my solemn duty to protect America and its citizens, the United States will withdraw from the Paris Climate Accord -- (applause) -- thank you, thank you -- but begin negotiations to reenter either the Paris Accord or a really entirely new transaction on terms that are fair to the United States, its businesses, its workers, its people, its taxpayers. So we're getting out. But we will start to negotiate, and we will see if we can make a deal that's fair. And if we can, that's great. And if we can't, that's fine. (Applause.)

As President, I can put no other consideration before the wellbeing of American citizens. The Paris Climate Accord is simply the latest example of Washington entering into an agreement that disadvantages the United States to the exclusive benefit of other countries, leaving American workers -- who I love -- and taxpayers to absorb the cost in terms of lost jobs, lower wages, shuttered factories, and vastly diminished economic production.

Thus, as of today, the United States will cease all implementation of the non-binding Paris Accord and the draconian financial and economic burdens the agreement imposes on our country. This includes ending the implementation of the nationally determined contribution and, very importantly, the Green Climate Fund which is costing the United States a vast fortune.

Compliance with the terms of the Paris Accord and the onerous energy restrictions it has placed on the United States could cost America as much as 2.7 million lost jobs by 2025 according to the National Economic Research Associates. This includes 440,000 fewer manufacturing jobs -- not what we need -- believe me, this is not what we need -- including automobile jobs, and the further decimation of vital American industries on which countless communities rely. They rely for so much, and we would be giving them so little.

According to this same study, by 2040, compliance with the commitments put into place by the previous administration would cut production for the following sectors: paper down 12 percent; cement down 23 percent; iron and steel down 38 percent; coal -- and I happen to love the coal miners -- down 86 percent; natural gas down 31 percent. The cost to the economy at this time would be close to $3 trillion in lost GDP and 6.5 million industrial jobs, while households would have $7,000 less income and, in many cases, much worse than that.

Not only does this deal subject our citizens to harsh economic restrictions, it fails to live up to our environmental ideals. As someone who cares deeply about the environment, which I do, I cannot in good conscience support a deal that punishes the United States -- which is what it does -- the world's leader in environmental protection, while imposing no meaningful obligations on the world's leading polluters.

For example, under the agreement, China will be able to increase these emissions by a staggering number of years -- 13. They can do whatever they want for 13 years. Not us. India makes its participation contingent on receiving billions and billions and billions of dollars in foreign aid from developed countries. There are many other examples. But the bottom line is that the Paris Accord is very unfair, at the highest level, to the United States.

Further, while the current agreement effectively blocks the development of clean coal in America -- which it does, and the mines are starting to open up. We're having a big opening in two weeks. Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, so many places. A big opening of a brand-new mine. It's unheard of. For many, many years, that hasn't happened. They asked me if I'd go. I'm going to try.

China will be allowed to build hundreds of additional coal plants. So we can't build the plants, but they can, according to this agreement. India will be allowed to double its coal production by 2020. Think of it: India can double their coal production. We're supposed to get rid of ours. Even Europe is allowed to continue construction of coal plants.

In short, the agreement doesn't eliminate coal jobs, it just transfers those jobs out of America and the United States, and ships them to foreign countries.

This agreement is less about the climate and more about other countries gaining a financial advantage over the United States. The rest of the world applauded when we signed the Paris Agreement -- they went wild; they were so happy -- for the simple reason that it put our country, the United States of America, which we all love, at a very, very big economic disadvantage. A cynic would say the obvious reason for economic competitors and their wish to see us remain in the agreement is so that we continue to suffer this self-inflicted major economic wound. We would find it very hard to compete with other countries from other parts of the world.

We have among the most abundant energy reserves on the planet, sufficient to lift millions of America's poorest workers out of poverty. Yet, under this agreement, we are effectively putting these reserves under lock and key, taking away the great wealth of our nation -- it's great wealth, it's phenomenal wealth; not so long ago, we had no idea we had such wealth -- and leaving millions and millions of families trapped in poverty and joblessness.

The agreement is a massive redistribution of United States wealth to other countries. At 1 percent growth, renewable sources of energy can meet some of our domestic demand, but at 3 or 4 percent growth, which I expect, we need all forms of available American energy, or our country -- (applause) -- will be at grave risk of brownouts and blackouts, our businesses will come to a halt in many cases, and the American family will suffer the consequences in the form of lost jobs and a very diminished quality of life.

Even if the Paris Agreement were implemented in full, with total compliance from all nations, it is estimated it would only produce a two-tenths of one degree -- think of that; this much -- Celsius reduction in global temperature by the year 2100. Tiny, tiny amount. In fact, 14 days of carbon emissions from China alone would wipe out the gains from America -- and this is an incredible statistic -- would totally wipe out the gains from America's expected reductions in the year 2030, after we have had to spend billions and billions of dollars, lost jobs, closed factories, and suffered much higher energy costs for our businesses and for our homes.

As the Wall Street Journal wrote this morning: "The reality is that withdrawing is in America's economic interest and won't matter much to the climate." The United States, under the Trump administration, will continue to be the cleanest and most environmentally friendly country on Earth. We'll be the cleanest. We're going to have the cleanest air. We're going to have the cleanest water. We will be environmentally friendly, but we're not going to put our businesses out of work and we're not going to lose our jobs. We're going to grow; we're going to grow rapidly. (Applause.)

And I think you just read -- it just came out minutes ago, the small business report -- small businesses as of just now are booming, hiring people. One of the best reports they've seen in many years.

I'm willing to immediately work with Democratic leaders to either negotiate our way back into Paris, under the terms that are fair to the United States and its workers, or to negotiate a new deal that protects our country and its taxpayers. (Applause.)

So if the obstructionists want to get together with me, let's make them non-obstructionists. We will all sit down, and we will get back into the deal. And we'll make it good, and we won't be closing up our factories, and we won't be losing our jobs. And we'll sit down with the Democrats and all of the people that represent either the Paris Accord or something that we can do that's much better than the Paris Accord. And I think the people of our country will be thrilled, and I think then the people of the world will be thrilled. But until we do that, we're out of the agreement.

I will work to ensure that America remains the world's leader on environmental issues, but under a framework that is fair and where the burdens and responsibilities are equally shared among the many nations all around the world.

No responsible leader can put the workers -- and the people -- of their country at this debilitating and tremendous disadvantage. The fact that the Paris deal hamstrings the United States, while empowering some of the world's top polluting countries, should dispel any doubt as to the real reason why foreign lobbyists wish to keep our magnificent country tied up and bound down by this agreement: It's to give their country an economic edge over the United States. That's not going to happen while I'm President. I'm sorry. (Applause.)

My job as President is to do everything within my power to give America a level playing field and to create the economic, regulatory and tax structures that make America the most prosperous and productive country on Earth, and with the highest standard of living and the highest standard of environmental protection.

Our tax bill is moving along in Congress, and I believe it's doing very well. I think a lot of people will be very pleasantly surprised. The Republicans are working very, very hard. We'd love to have support from the Democrats, but we may have to go it alone. But it's going very well.

The Paris Agreement handicaps the United States economy in order to win praise from the very foreign capitals and global activists that have long sought to gain wealth at our country's expense. They don't put America first. I do, and I always will. (Applause.)

The same nations asking us to stay in the agreement are the countries that have collectively cost America trillions of dollars through tough trade practices and, in many cases, lax contributions to our critical military alliance. You see what's happening. It's pretty obvious to those that want to keep an open mind.

At what point does America get demeaned? At what point do they start laughing at us as a country? We want fair treatment for its citizens, and we want fair treatment for our taxpayers. We don't want other leaders and other countries laughing at us anymore. And they won't be. They won't be.

I was elected to represent the citizens of Pittsburgh, not Paris. (Applause.) I promised I would exit or renegotiate any deal which fails to serve America's interests. Many trade deals will soon be under renegotiation. Very rarely do we have a deal that works for this country, but they'll soon be under renegotiation. The process has begun from day one. But now we're down to business.

Beyond the severe energy restrictions inflicted by the Paris Accord, it includes yet another scheme to redistribute wealth out of the United States through the so-called Green Climate Fund -- nice name -- which calls for developed countries to send $100 billion to developing countries all on top of America's existing and massive foreign aid payments. So we're going to be paying billions and billions and billions of dollars, and we're already way ahead of anybody else. Many of the other countries haven't spent anything, and many of them will never pay one dime.

The Green Fund would likely obligate the United States to commit potentially tens of billions of dollars of which the United States has already handed over $1 billion -- nobody else is even close; most of them haven't even paid anything -- including funds raided out of America's budget for the war against terrorism. That's where they came. Believe me, they didn't come from me. They came just before I came into office. Not good. And not good the way they took the money.

In 2015, the United Nation's departing top climate officials reportedly described the $100 billion per year as "peanuts," and stated that "the $100 billion is the tail that wags the dog." In 2015, the Green Climate Fund's executive director reportedly stated that estimated funding needed would increase to $450 billion per year after 2020. And nobody even knows where the money is going to. Nobody has been able to say, where is it going to?

Of course, the world's top polluters have no affirmative obligations under the Green Fund, which we terminated. America is $20 trillion in debt. Cash-strapped cities cannot hire enough police officers or fix vital infrastructure. Millions of our citizens are out of work. And yet, under the Paris Accord, billions of dollars that ought to be invested right here in America will be sent to the very countries that have taken our factories and our jobs away from us. So think of that.

There are serious legal and constitutional issues as well. Foreign leaders in Europe, Asia, and across the world should not have more to say with respect to the U.S. economy than our own citizens and their elected representatives. Thus, our withdrawal from the agreement represents a reassertion of America's sovereignty. (Applause.) Our Constitution is unique among all the nations of the world, and it is my highest obligation and greatest honor to protect it. And I will.

Staying in the agreement could also pose serious obstacles for the United States as we begin the process of unlocking the restrictions on America's abundant energy reserves, which we have started very strongly. It would once have been unthinkable that an international agreement could prevent the United States from conducting its own domestic economic affairs, but this is the new reality we face if we do not leave the agreement or if we do not negotiate a far better deal.

The risks grow as historically these agreements only tend to become more and more ambitious over time. In other words, the Paris framework is a starting point -- as bad as it is -- not an end point. And exiting the agreement protects the United States from future intrusions on the United States' sovereignty and massive future legal liability. Believe me, we have massive legal liability if we stay in.

As President, I have one obligation, and that obligation is to the American people. The Paris Accord would undermine our economy, hamstring our workers, weaken our sovereignty, impose unacceptable legal risks, and put us at a permanent disadvantage to the other countries of the world. It is time to exit the Paris Accord -- (applause) -- and time to pursue a new deal that protects the environment, our companies, our citizens, and our country.

It is time to put Youngstown, Ohio, Detroit, Michigan, and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania -- along with many, many other locations within our great country -- before Paris, France. It is time to make America great again. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you. Thank you very much.

Thank you very much. Very important. I'd like to ask Scott Pruitt, who most of you know and respect, as I do, just to say a few words.

Scott, please. (Applause.)

ADMINISTRATOR PRUITT: Thank you, Mr. President. Your decision today to exit the Paris Accord reflects your unflinching commitment to put America first.

And by exiting, you're fulfilling yet one more campaign promise to the American people. Please know that I am thankful for your fortitude, your courage, and your steadfastness as you serve and lead our country.

America finally has a leader who answers only to the people -- not to the special interests who have had their way for way too long. In everything you do, Mr. President, you're fighting for the forgotten men and women across this country. You're a champion for the hardworking citizens all across this land who just want a government that listens to them and represents their interest.

You have promised to put America First in all that you do, and you've done that in any number of ways -- from trade, to national security, to protecting our border, to rightsizing Washington, D.C. And today you've put America first with regard to international agreements and the environment.

This is an historic restoration of American economic independence -- one that will benefit the working class, the working poor, and working people of all stripes. With this action, you have declared that the people are rulers of this country once again. And it should be noted that we as a nation do it better than anyone in the world in striking the balance between growing our economy, growing jobs while also being a good steward of our environment.

We owe no apologies to other nations for our environmental stewardship. After all, before the Paris Accord was ever signed, America had reduced its CO2 footprint to levels from the early 1990s. In fact, between the years 2000 and 2014, the United States reduced its carbon emissions by 18-plus percent. And this was accomplished not through government mandate, but accomplished through innovation and technology of the American private sector.

For that reason, Mr. President, you have corrected a view that was paramount in Paris that somehow the United States should penalize its own economy, be apologetic, lead with our chin, while the rest of world does little. Other nations talk a good game; we lead with action -- not words. (Applause.)

Our efforts, Mr. President, as you know, should be on exporting our technology, our innovation to nations who seek to reduce their CO2 footprint to learn from us. That should be our focus versus agreeing to unachievable targets that harm our economy and the American people.

Mr. President, it takes courage, it takes commitment to say no to the plaudits of men while doing what's right by the American people. You have that courage, and the American people can take comfort because you have their backs.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The business case for the Paris agreement has nothing to do with climate change. It goes like this: It is better to be part of any confab than outside of it. Like saluting the flag or bowing your head in church, there is no cost to being insincere, but there is a cost to not going along.

Let us understand something: 195 countries will not be dragged kicking and screaming to sign any agreement that imposes a cost on them. Such deals exist only because they provide an international imprimatur to what politicians were going to do anyway.

The oil countries like Saudi Arabia and Norway signed. They plan to keep producing oil. India and China plan to grow energy consumption until it is similar to the per capita consumption of the developed countries, at which point it will level off.

The U.S. and Europe intend to keep subsidizing green energy as long as domestic voters give them permission to do so, because the whole point of being in office is to redirect resources to interest groups best able to reward politicians for doling out the goodies.

The Paris countries agreed to meet certain emissions targets, and claimed an intent to hold a planetary temperature increase to less than 2 degrees Celsius.

Not only are the emission targets unenforceable, they have no intelligible relation to the temperature goal according to the very iffy science. By the shot-in-the-dark estimates of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, it's even possible the rest of the century will bring little warming anyway.

And that's good. Because the unenforceable cuts agreed to in Paris would be a rounding error even if carried out.

In the 30 years since global warming became a daily concern of the newspapers, one lesson has been reliably demonstrated for policy participants: There is no appetite in the body politic for the kinds of energy taxes and prohibitions needed to make a meaningful change in atmospheric CO_2.

We won't dwell on the media hysteria since the Trump decision, or why many of you, dear readers, in defiance of your own reason, will participate in the hysteria even when you know better. Human beings are social animals. When a mob is forming, we experience high anxiety if we're not part of it.

Agreements like Paris arguably aim at the wrong target anyway. Only when technology can meet mankind's energy demand at competitive cost will low-carbon energy prevail. Governments would be wise to invest in basic energy research rather than throwing money at energy technologies that are viable only as long as the subsidies keep flowing. But the latter is what brings in the political bacon.

Oh well. Hypocrisy is the universal solvent of social relations. This also explains the other big climate story of the day, which reporters have given themselves hypoxia trying to inflate the significance of. We're referring to the vote by 62% of Exxon shareholders, led by giant funds Vanguard, Fidelity and BlackRock, to ask the company to explain how the Paris temperature target would affect its business.

For 30 years there has been push-and-pull in politics over climate change. During every nanosecond of that time, at least while markets were open, investors were repricing energy shares in light of the possibility of climate change legislation.

Exxon has nothing new or useful to tell investors in this regard. Would a carbon tax be good for bad for the company? It would accelerate the displacement of coal by natural gas, which Exxon produces. Is an electric-car battery in the offing that would go 300 miles and be rechargeable in a five-minute stop at a charging station? Probably not. In which case, even a sizable carbon tax would be unlikely to make much dent in the 8% of global emissions caused by passenger cars. Americans bought 143 billion gallons of gas last year when the price was $2.25; they bought 133 billion gallons in 2012 when the price was $3.64.

This gesture, of surpassing meaninglessness, is a case of one prominent institution trying to buff up its reputation for church attendance at the expense of another.

And yet, regardless of Mr. Trump's Paris decision, only one large national economy has been reporting sizable emissions declines, thanks to fracking. The same economy may soon also be able to take credit for slowing China's prodigious emissions growth thanks to natural gas exports to displace Chinese coal. That country is the U.S. under the unthinkable monster Donald Trump. Whatever evolution toward a lower-carbon energy system takes place in the future, it will also certainly be driven overwhelmingly by technology and markets, not policy.

"Scare Pollution: Why and How to Fix the EPA"

The Environmental Protection Agency's flagship scientific research and regulatory programs revolve around the claim that air pollution kills hundreds of thousands of Americans every year. Steve Milloy will discuss the shockingly fraudulent and even illegal science behind EPA's claims as detailed in his new book, "Scare Pollution: Why and How to Fix the EPA." These claims have been used to justify global warming rules, destroy the coal industry, and assert EPA control over our fossil fuel-dependent economy. Milloy's exposé tells the story of how he uncovered the EPA's misconduct via his investigative journalism, original scientific research, and revealing interactions with EPA, Congress, federal courts and green activists. Copies of Scare Pollution will be available at no charge for attendees.

Dear Representative,

The undersigned organizations write in strong support of Representative Warren Davidson's amendment #388 to H. R. 2810, the National Defense Authorization Act, that if enacted would prevent the Department of Defense from continuing to implement Executive Order 13693. This executive order requires the Department of Defense to create a number of climate change programs and policies throughout the Department.

These climate programs and policies have nothing to do with the mission of the United States' Armed Services. In fact, many of these programs and policies are likely to undermine military readiness by diverting scarce resources to such things as helping state and local governments to "go green," meeting targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions, meeting a variety of green energy quotas, meeting fleet requirements for low and zero emissions vehicles, and incorporating climate resilience and preparedness as principal aims of land and water management.

As you know, President Trump repealed a similar Executive Order (13653), which required the Department of Defense to develop "comprehensive plans that integrate consideration of climate change into agency operations and overall mission objectives." We applaud President Trump for repealing Executive Order 13653. In our view, this was an entirely unsuitable addition to the critical mission of our men and women in uniform. Rep. Davidson's amendment would continue President Trump's work and further curtail the Department of Defense's unnecessary and irrelevant forays into climate change policy.

For these reasons, we urge you to vote Yes on Rep. Davidson's amendment #388 to H. R. 2810. Thank you for considering our views.

Sincerely,

LAST YEAR'S LETTER:

May 16, 2016

Dear Representative,

The undersigned organizations write in strong support of Representative John Fleming's amendment #87 to H. R. 4909, the National Defense Authorization Act, that if enacted would prevent the Department of Defense from continuing to implement Executive Orders 13653 and 13693. These two executive orders require the Department of Defense to create a number of climate change programs and policies throughout the Department.

These climate programs and policies have nothing to do with the mission of the United States' Armed Services. In fact, many of these programs and policies are likely to undermine military readiness by diverting scarce resources to such things as helping state and local governments to "go green," meeting targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions, meeting a variety of green energy quotas, meeting fleet requirements for low and zero emissions vehicles, and incorporating climate resilience and preparedness as principal aims of land and water management.

Most importantly, Rep. Fleming's amendment would prevent the Department of Defense from implementing section 5 of Executive Order 13653, which requires the Department of Defense to develop "comprehensive plans that integrate consideration of climate change into agency operations and overall mission objectives." In our view, this is an entirely unsuitable addition to the critical mission of our men and women in uniform.

For these reasons, we urge you to vote Yes on Rep. Fleming's amendment #87 to H. R. 4909. Thank you for considering our views.

"Scare Pollution: Why and How to Fix the EPA"

The Environmental Protection Agency's flagship scientific research and regulatory programs revolve around the claim that air pollution kills hundreds of thousands of Americans every year. Steve Milloy will discuss the shockingly fraudulent and even illegal science behind EPA's claims as detailed in his new book, "Scare Pollution: Why and How to Fix the EPA." These claims have been used to justify global warming rules, destroy the coal industry, and assert EPA control over our fossil fuel-dependent economy. Milloy's exposé tells the story of how he uncovered the EPA's misconduct via his investigative journalism, original scientific research, and revealing interactions with EPA, Congress, federal courts and green activists. Copies of Scare Pollution will be available at no charge for attendees.

Steve Milloy

Steve Milloy is the founder and publisher of JunkScience.com and a senior policy fellow at the Energy and Environmental Legal Institute. He served in 2016 on the Trump Transition's EPA team.

In addition to his most recent book, Scare Pollution published in 2016, Mr. Milloy is the author of Green Hell: How Environmentalists Plan to Control Your Life and What You Can Do to Stop Them; Junk Science Judo: Self-defense Against Health Scares and Scams; Silencing Science, with co-author Michael Gough; Science Without Sense: The Risky Business of Public Health Research; and Science-Based Risk Assessment. Myron,

Please see the below talking points. Look forward to seeing you at the event tomorrow.

Eliminating Conflicts of Interest.

- Administrator Pruitt is establishing a policy that if you currently receive dollars from the agency in grant money, you are not eligible to serve on all EPA advisory boards. The Administrator made a commitment to ensure independence from EPA on these boards when they make advisory decisions.
- Example- Past SAB and CASAC members have received upwards of tens of millions of dollars in grant money over the last 10 years.

The previous Administration excluded state and local interests from their boards, ignoring principals of cooperative federalism.

- For the Science Advisory Connectivity Panel, which was reviewing a highly influential scientific assessment designed to inform EPA's authority under the Clean Water Act and EPA's drafting 2015 WOTUS, EPA did not include state and local experts.
- For EPA's Fracturing Research Advisory Panel Subcommittee, there were zero individuals representing state/local matters on the actual panel, despite there being multiple state/local nominees to serve on the panel

S(109)(D)(2)(A) requires CASAC to have 7 members including a physician, a NAS member and a state representative. The previous Administration allowed the same board member to wear multiple roles when serving on the CASAC board – Administrator Pruitt believes this is in contrary to what the law states and will uphold the law by having 3 unique individuals represent these 3 required roles. This confusion of wearing "multiple hats" only deepens the lack of transparency – i.e. which one do you represent if you wear multiple hats?

I am free nearly all of the 17th and perhaps the two of you can join Kreutzer and me in my offices. Just let me know when so I can reserve that time.

Hi Myron,
Great – so you are confirmed for a 45 minute meeting on Friday, February 16 at 2:00pm with Bill Wehrum. I believe you all know how to get to our offices, but just in case see below for directions.
Directions and procedures to 1200 Pennsylvania Avenue NW:

Metro: If you come by Metro get off at the Federal Triangle metro stop. Exit the metro station and go up two sets of escalators to the surface level and turn right. You will see a short staircase and wheelchair ramp leading to a set of glass doors with the EPA logo - that is the William Jefferson Clinton Federal Building, North Entrance.

Taxi: Direct the taxi to drop you off on 12th Street NW, between Constitution and Pennsylvania Avenues, at the elevator for the Federal Triangle metro stop - this is almost exactly half way between the two avenues on 12th Street NW. Facing the building with the EPA logo and American flags, walk toward the building and take the glass door on your right hand side with the escalators going down to the metro on your left – that is the North Lobby of the William Jefferson Clinton building.

Security Procedures: A government issued photo id is required to enter the building and it is suggested you arrive 15 minutes early in order to be cleared and arrive at the meeting room on time. Upon entering the lobby, the meeting attendees will be asked to pass through security and provide a photo ID for entrance. Let the guards know that you were instructed to call 202-564-7404 for a security escort.
Please feel free to contact me should you need any additional information.

Peter - Per your request, here is more background on Administrator Pruitt's event tomorrow in Pennsylvania:

Administrator Pruitt is kicking off EPA's Back-to-Basics agenda by joining hard-working coal miners to celebrate the beginning of a new era for jobs in America.

The coal industry was nearly devastated by years of regulatory overreach, but with new direction from President Trump, we are turning things around for these miners and for many other hard working Americans.

Administrator Pruitt looks forward to launching the Back-to-Basics agenda in coal country as we work to return EPA to its originally intended mission of protecting the environment and the jobs that power America.

Here you go – let us know if you need any more details.

OBAMA EPA:

1. When it comes to closing down contaminated Superfund sites, we inherited over 1,300 sites; the Obama Administration only cleaned up a handful.

2. When it comes to commonsense regulations, the Clean Power Plan and Waters of the United States rule are reasons why Obama's EPA let us down.

3. Obama's own administration said they dropped the ball at Gold King Mine. The release resulted in three million gallons of water with acid mine drainage containing heavy metals like arsenic, cadmium, lead, and mercury spilling into the river and turning it yellow.

NEW LEADERSHIP IS HERE

- What are we doing? Getting back to the basics.

- Focusing on air attainment, improving the quality of air for our citizens. Investing in water infrastructure; actually make cleaning up Superfunds a priority.

- Last week Administrator Pruitt announced a new directive to prioritize and streamline Superfund cleanup at sites with remedies costing $50 million or more. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/epa-administrator-announces-new-directive-prioritize-superfund-cleanups

EAST CHICAGO

- Last month, Administrator Pruitt visited the USS Lead Superfund site in East Chicago, Indiana.

- He was the first EPA Administrator to visit the Superfund site that was listed on the National Priorities List of the worst contaminated sites in the country in 2009.

- Administrator Pruitt met with residents who are concerned with contamination in their community and listened to their concerns.

- He issued a joint statement with Indiana's Governor, Senators and local officials pledging improved communication and coordination.

- EPA has taken steps to expedite cleanup at Superfund site under Administrator Pruitt's leadership. https://www.epa.gov/newsreleases/epa-administrator-visits-contaminated-site-east-chicago-pledges-coordinated-cleanup

Hugh Hewitt Radio: EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt On The New Direction At The E.P.A.
"I mean, the past administration is viewed as the environmental savior. But when you look at air attainment in this country, we're at 40% non-attainment right now on ozone. About 140 million people live in non-attainment areas for air quality, under air quality programs. Superfund sites, we have more today than when President Obama came into office. Water infrastructure, you had Flint and you had Gold King. And so what's, and the regulations that they issued on carbon, they failed twice. They struck out twice. So when you look at their record, what exactly did they accomplish for the environment that folks are so excited about? You know, we're coming in trying to focus on a back to basics agenda to say look, it's unacceptable for the Westlake facility in St. Louis, Missouri to languish on a national priority list for 20-plus years. It's time for leadership."

The Hill: EPA chief: Obama was no 'environmental savior'
The head of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) tore into former President Barack Obama's environmental record Thursday, saying he failed in important areas... Scott Pruitt accused the Obama administration of "poor leadership" and "poor focus," resulting in bad air quality, more contaminated sites under the Superfund cleanup program, and water pollution crises.

Washington Times: EPA chief Pruitt: Obama no 'environmental savior,' past administration accomplished nothing
In a radio interview with Hugh Hewitt, Mr. Pruitt said the past administration talked a good game on the environment, but has little in the way of concrete accomplishments. He pointed to the environmental disaster in Flint, Michigan, and the Gold King Mine spill, both of which led to widespread water contamination. He also said the administration's attempts to rein in carbon emissions were blocked by federal courts, as were other high-profile regulations. At the same time, Mr. Pruitt charged, much of the country remained in non-compliance with federal ozone standards, and the number of Superfund sites — areas contaminated by hazardous waste and identified for federal clean-up efforts — increased during Mr. Obama's tenure.

Would this be okay as the setup to his segment

THIS AFTER THE OBAMA ADMINISTRATION LEFT BEHIND A HUGE TOXIC MESS
MORE THAN 13-HUNDRED SUPER-FUND SITES. WHICH ARE HEAVILY CONTAMINATED -- STILL REQUIRE CLEAN-UPS.
SO WHY WAS PRESIDENT OBAMA TOUTED AS AN ENVIRONMENTAL SAVIOR IF ALL THESE PROBLEMS STILL EXIST?

With regard to you question on Ryan...

"It is customary for the office of general counsel and the chief of staff to provide guidance to an EPA employee testifying in front of Congress, including the importance of providing factual information and speaking as an individual, rather than on behalf of the Agency."

For additional background, even if she is testifying in her personal capacity, she is still the chair of BOSC. She was invited to testify in a Hearing in EPA and states role, where other witnesses were state regulators. The Congressional affairs office was never notified she was testifying, and it isn't the role of the head of the research office to provide guidance for those testifying.

Is the administrator avail to speak today or tomorrow? We've held the story from pubbing since Friday on the understanding that we cld include his voice, which is what we want here.

Meanwhile, separately, can Ryan speak about these emails and this testimony?

Hi Coral – Since it seems like you already have the story written, if you want to insert something after the fact from EPA, you can use the following attributed to me...I also have some additional scientific information on Chlorpyrifos, per your earlier email. Thanks – Liz

ON THE RECORD:

"We consult and coordinate with career staff; we welcome their expertise and guidance.

"EPA's efforts to review regulations take into account public comment, counsel and input from a wide range of stakeholders – from environmental groups to farmers to large companies to environmental ministers from other countries.

"The decisions that we are making are based on the best available science, taking into account potential risks to human health and the environment. We are going to evaluate all the evidence and rely on the highest quality studies."

Additional Scientific Information:

Chlorpyrifos: In November 2016, EPA released documents to the federal docket regarding food-use tolerance revocations of chlorpyrifos. That proposed action followed a long review of chlorpyrifos that included three separate Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA) Scientific Advisory Panels (SAPs), the first two held in 2008 and 2012, and the most recent in April 2016 (see transcript). As is seen in these peer review reports, peer reviewers recognized the complexity of the available data, including human, animal and mechanistic information. In 2017, EPA denied a petition requesting that EPA revoke all tolerances. USDA scientists supported this determination.

Despite several years of study, EPA has concluded that the science addressing neurodevelopmental effects remains unresolved. Further evaluation of the science during the remaining time for completion of registration review is warranted to achieve greater certainty as to whether the potential exists for adverse neurodevelopmental effects to occur from current human exposures to chlorpyrifos.

Hi, guys,

Still hoping to speak to Administrator Pruitt this afternoon -- is that on? We def want his voice in this story but at this point we are also wanting to move forward with this story ASAP.

Meanwhile I'm now writing a separate story - this is about emails that Ryan sent to BOSC chair Dr. Swackhamer about her testimony before House Science last month.

Dr. Swackhamer & House Science Dems say that Ryan appeared to have attempted to pressure Dr. Swackhamer to alter her testimony to better line up w. EPA's talking points on the non-renewal of BOSC positions.

Cld Ryan chat about this?

Cheers,
