Hi Jared,

I messed up one of the links I gave you -- there were two URLs with almost exactly the same numbers in them.

Please replace the one ending in 3055 -- tree and sky -- with another from the same set: the Tule River rocks photo:

Here's the entire (corrected) list again. Sorry about the mixup!

Bill

Hi Jared,

Here's a list of links to the photos on your Flickr site that we need in full-resolution for the Progress Report. I just had Dropbox resend you an invitation to join.... if you do, it will allow you to save the files to a folder on your laptop, and I'll be able to access them as well.

Below the list of links is your draft letter from the inside front cover. Have a look, and let me know what changes you'd like to see.

Thanks! Let me know if I can make any of this easier. And have a good trip to see POTUS tomorrow!

Dear Readers,

Earlier this year I announced the completion of EPA's Strategic Plan for the Pacific Southwest

Region, which builds on Administrator Lisa Jackson's ambitious five-year plan for the agency.

The result is now available online at www.epa.gov/region9/strategicplan.

In addition to focusing our limited human and financial resources on areas of greatest need and impact, the strategy helps hold us accountable for achieving stated goals -- and helps us communicate our progress to the public and our federal, state, local and tribal partners.

While outlining clear and measurable objectives for protecting the environment and public health between now and 2014, the plan also prioritizes our ongoing work in key geographic areas, including the I-710 corridor in Southern California, the Navajo Nation and the Pacific islands.

We invite your input on our work and your help in protecting the environment not just in these key areas, but throughout our vast and precious region.

Jared Blumenfeld
