Just to clarify the one regulatory deadline in response to receiving a permit application: the administrative completeness review must be done within 30 days of receiving the permit application. Here is the timeline for permit application review:

History of Permit Application Review

- 1st Class III permit application for uranium recovery received Dec 24, 2008
- EPA issued the Class III Administratively Complete Letter Jan 2009.
- (The administratively complete review is a cursory review with a 30-day deadline required under EPA decision-making regulations to determine if required sections of the permit application are present. An administratively complete permit application may not be technically complete.)
- 1st Class V permit application for disposal of ISR waste fluids received Mar 30, 2010
- EPA issued the Class V Administratively Letter issued April 2010
- Neither of the permit applications were technically complete.
- Revised Class V Permit Application received Jan 2012 was technically complete.
- Revised Class III Permit Application received July 2012 was not technically complete.
- A second revised Class III Permit Application receive Jan 2013 was technically complete.
