Marshall,

I know EPA is working on several issues that we have been discussing regarding the Seal Shield SSURO as follows:

1) international website access, which Seal Shield has explained in a detailed report submitted to EPA as CBI;
2) use of the word "silver" in website, which Seal Shield understands that EPA's explanation is forthcoming; and
3) the proposed importation of warehoused products to the US for sale as non-pesticidal products, which EPA is addressing with its headquarters office.

While the parties have been cooperating and diligently addressing these issues, Seal Shield is concerned that EPA may not be attending to other issues that had previously been raised by Seal Shield. These issues include:

1) Seal Shield's request for removal of the name of the Seal Shield antimicrobial from the SSURO. Seal Shield understands that the name had been used in the original SSURO but maintains that any use of the name has been inappropriate since the name was originally provided to the Florida inspector as CBI; and

2) Seal Shield's request for the penalty assessment worksheet prepared by EPA. If EPA intends to pursue the proposed penalty assessment in this matter, Seal Shield again requests that its worksheet be made available to Seal Shield for review.

Seal Shield requests that EPA provide an update on these issues as well.

Please let me know if you have any questions regarding these matters.

Sincerely,

Ed Schwartz
