Things Needing Management Attention:

- SLT needs to be very proactive, forthcoming, and compassionate about proposed reduction in force (RIF) concerns with employees (especially the younger ones). I went through a RIF in my 20s, and I know firsthand how morale suffers and many will start looking for employment elsewhere. The lack of good information and an unconcerned management is some of the reasons I left USAF and went with EPA instead of taking my chances with a RIF. In hindsight, I probably could have survived the RIF and might have stayed if I would have had better support and information, which was not provided at the time. I have already noticed younger employees looking very anxious, and I'm sure they are weighing their options like I did 25 years ago.
