To: Hull, George[Hull.George@epa.gov]; Jones, Enesta[Jones.Enesta@epa.gov]; Garvin, Shawn[garvin.shawn@epa.gov]; Bloomgren, David[Bloomgren.David@epa.gov]; White, Terri-A[White.Terri-A@epa.gov]
Cc: Loop, Travis[Loop.Travis@epa.gov]; Senn, John[Senn.John@epa.gov]; Reynolds, Thomas[Reynolds.Thomas@epa.gov]
From: Behringer, Caroline
Sent: Fri 1/24/2014 2:57:14 PM
Subject: Capacasa on NPR this AM

Shogren on chemicals in water on NPR this morning. Interviewed Jon Capacasa in R3 for the piece. Thanks to all who helped make it happen!

http://www.npr.org/2014/01/24/265520673/water-companies-cant-monitor-all-chemicals-theres-too-many

Water Companies Can't Monitor All Chemicals, There's Too Many

Nearly two weeks after a chemical spill contaminated drinking water in West Virginia, the company involved revealed that it had spilled a second chemical too. Fortunately, officials don't think there was any added risk to the public. The fact that a second contaminant eluded detection reveals an important truth about drinking water supplies and how they're tested for contaminants.

CB

Caroline Behringer

Deputy Press Secretary

Office of the Administrator

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Office: (202) 564-0098

Cell: (202) 760-1732

To: Hull, George[Hull.George@epa.gov]; Jones, Enesta[Jones.Enesta@epa.gov]; Garvin, Shawn[garvin.shawn@epa.gov]; Bloomgren, David[Bloomgren.David@epa.gov]; White, Terri-A[White.Terri-A@epa.gov]
Cc: Loop, Travis[Loop.Travis@epa.gov]; Senn, John[Senn.John@epa.gov]; Reynolds, Thomas[Reynolds.Thomas@epa.gov]
From: Behringer, Caroline
Sent: Fri 1/24/2014 2:57:14 PM
Subject: Capacasa on NPR this AM

Shogren on chemicals in water on NPR this morning. Interviewed Jon Capacasa in R3 for the piece. Thanks to all who helped make it happen!

http://www.npr.org/2014/01/24/265520673/water-companies-cant-monitor-all-chemicals-theres-too-many

Water Companies Can't Monitor All Chemicals, There's Too Many

Nearly two weeks after a chemical spill contaminated drinking water in West Virginia, the company involved revealed that it had spilled a second chemical too. Fortunately, officials don't think there was any added risk to the public. The fact that a second contaminant eluded detection reveals an important truth about drinking water supplies and how they're tested for contaminants.

CB

Caroline Behringer

Deputy Press Secretary

Office of the Administrator

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Office: (202) 564-0098

Cell: (202) 760-1732